BLOOMSBURG, PA., FRIDAY, APRIL 11. 1879. Poetical. A LEGEND FROM THE TAL-MUD. BY CHARLOTTE M. PACKARD. The patriarch Abram sat in his tent door Waiting the guest whom God perchan would send To ask an alms from his abundant store Or timely shelter, given as to a friend, The cool wind lifting carelessly his hair, Stirred to new thankfulness his soul seren When looking up, one waiting halted there. Whose shadow trembled on the earth, I ween. An old, old pilgrim, leaning on his staff, With vision dim returned his asking gaze, His story in his aspect written half. And half rehearsed in slow, uncertain phrahe Father of the Fathful welcomed him. Bathed the tired feet and proffered wine and bread. Looking to trace, e'en in that visage grim, A grateful soul beat to the Hand that fed. Yet blessing none escaped the famished lips; This heathen beggar knew no God be Fire : o Charity was lost in swift eclipse, And Abram cried in his exceeding ire : "I cast thee out, ungrateful, to partake Of the great desert's shelter, that the nigh Darkening around, thy graceless sout may shakes. Since He is in the dusk as in the light !" But the Lord called to Abram in his sleep ; "How petty thy impatient soul appears, nwilling for a single night to keep Whom God hath suffered, lo ! these hundre years! BABY HAS GONE TO SCHOOL The baby has gone to school ; ah me ! What will the mother do, With never a call to button or pin, Or tie a little shoe ? How can she keep herself busy all day. With the little "hindering thing" away Another backet to fill with lanch, Another "good by" to say, And the mother stands at the door to see Her baby march away ; And turns with a sigh that is half relief. And half a something akin to grief She thinks of a possible future morn, When the children, one by one.
