Thursday afternoon. He called a meeting of the Adventists and said he had a very important communication to impart from the Most High. The usual praying and singing were dispensed with, and Freeman proceded with the recital of his terrible crime, giving every point with painful minuteness. The Adventists then quietly dispersed, and each kept locked in his own breast the awful se cret with which they were now possessed. Mr. and Mrs. Aiden P. Davis both Adven tists, remained all night in the house of the Freemans, the latter couple retiring early and sleeping soundly, the body of their murdered child meanwhile lying in the bed where it had been struck down. It was their laughter, Miss Minnie, who first told Offier Redding of the unnatural crime. When Freeman was asked about it he did not er deavor to hide the truth. On the other hand Northwest and the highest hourly velocity du- he told everything and trusted in the Lord to restore his child to life. The most intensi excitement prevails and the Adventists are bjects of scorn throughout the village.
