EARLY USE OF BELLS.

It is evident that the earliest use of bells in churches was to summon the congregation; but superstition soon enlisted them into her service. It then became customary at their consecration to pray that they might be endowed with power to drive away devils, and dissipate thunder storms, hail and tempests. In the opinion of those who originated the practice, the evil spirits were the cause of foul weather, and being terrified at the saintly sounds of the bells, they precipitately fled. In parish accounts in the fifteenth century bread, cheese, and beer are charged for the refreshment of the ringers during 'thunderings.' So late as 1852, the Bishop of Malta ordered all the church bells to be rung for an hour to aliay a gale After the discovery had been made of the potency of bells in terrifying spirits, they were naturally employed in all the matters in which fiends were reputed to interfere. It was the weapon with which St. Anthony fought the legion of demons who torn ented him during his long hermitical life, and in the figures which were drawn of him during well and saved the doctor bills. Three do the middle ages, he is represented as carrying a bell in his hand, or suspended from work all the time. I'll warrant it has cos his staff. The passing bell, which was formerly tolled for those who were dying or passing out of the world, as well as the peal become, I'll use your medicine hereaf-which was rung after their death, grew out ten.

of the belief that devils troubled the expir ng patient, and lay in wait to afflict the soul at the moment when it escaped from the body, and occasionally even to battle for it with guardian angels. The Bishop of Chalons christened a peal of bells in 1822, and, in a sermon which he delivered on the occasion, said : 'The bells placed like sentinels on the towers watch over us, and turn away from us the temptsbe true,' says a writer, 'there is no more virtue in the clapper of a bell than in the ongue of a priest."

The first actual fire bell was hung in the hurch of Sherberne, England, in 1652. It had upon it the following inscription:

"Lord quench this furtous flame ; Artse, run, help put out the same. -Troy Times.

STRUGGLE FOR EXISTENCE WITH RATS.

The plague of rats in the Deccan, Bombay, for the second season in succession, i occasioning serious alarm. These animals verspread the country like locusts, destroy the crops almost as thorughly, and are even Mediterranean. Popular name-Little Rho- become the aspect of sifairs that a 'Rat Committee' was appointed to inquire into the best means of disposing of these creatures. They went thoroughly into the question af-ter the manner of committees in India, and their recommendations are carefully tabulated. The people are to turn out en masse and face the enemy; rewards are to be offered for dead rats, and in fact, the invasion is to be treated as a matter to be dealt whom this territory was granted by the King with vigorously by the whole community No great way will, however, be made until the same measures are adopted which are taken with rabbits in Australia when they become an upendurable nuisance. It has been found that the only successful plan is Pennsylvania was so called in 1681, after The difficulty in Australia is to obtain suf-to block up all the holes which can be found. ficient labor for this process. That difficul ty is not likely to exist in Bombay, and a prrespondent of a Bombay newspaper has already suggested that this plan should be adopted. In the meantime the question has arisen as to how the rats have so increased and multiplied. This point can, however be discussed with more calmness when they have in some way been reduced to their former subordination .- Pall Mall Gazette August 11.

AGE OF GLASS.

The oldest specimen of pure glass bearing anything like a date is a little molded lion's head, bearing the name of an Egyptian king of the eleventh dynasty, in the Slade col lection at the British Museum. That is to say, at a period which may be moderately placed at more than 2,000 years B. C., glas was not only made, but made with a skill which shows that the art was nothing new The invention of glazing pottery with a film or varnish of glass is so old that among the fragments which bear inscriptions of the early Egyptian monarchy are beads possibly note the whole river, i. c., the river formed of the first dynasty. Of later glass there are numerous examples, such as a bead found at Thebes, which has the name of Queen Hat asoo or Hashep, of the eighteenth dynasty-Of the same period are vases and goblets an many fragments. It cannot be doubted that the story prepared by Pliny, which assignss principal river. The word Ten-as-se is said the credit of the invention to the Phonicians, is so far true that these adventurous merchants brought specimens to other coun tries from Egypt. Dr. Schliemann found disks of glass in the excavations at Mycenæ though Homer does not mention it as a substance known to him. That the modern art of the glass blower was known long before is certain from representations among the pictures on the walls of a tomb at Beni Has an, of the twelfth Egyptian dynasty; but much older picture, which probably repesented the same manufacture, is among he half-obliterated scenes in a chamber of the tomb of Thy at Sakkara, and dates from the time of the fifth dynasty, a time so re mote that it is not possible, in spite of the assiduous researches of many Egyptologers,

AT A HOLY WELL IN IRELAND.

For several miles our road was bounded by bog on one side and rocks on the other There were no evidences of human habita tion, yet here and there we passed a peasant some crippled, all plunged in profound misery. I inquired the errand of these post creatures and was informed that it was S Somebody's Day, and they were going to Leon in 1572, because it was discovered on her well near by to be healed.

'It's there beyond,' said a trembling old voman, pointing her skinny finger to a clump of trees and a stone wall a few hund red yards distant. I alighted, and walked down the valley to a small inclosure which surrounded a well and a withered tree Near by was a rude stone alter, upon which were numerous offerings of toys, bits of broken ware, and shreds of many-colored rags tied to sticks, and kneeling beside it was a group of cripples; some moved slowly round the circles on their knees, mutterng prayers, some were telling their beads, others partook of the water, while a priest stood by the tree reading. This, then, was one of the holy wells so numerous in Ireland o which visits are still frequently made, in some cases as works of penance, either voluntary or enjoined, but generally for obtainng health, under the auspices of the saint, by drinking the waters of the well. O ourse the day of the patron saint of each well is the one chosen for their visits; and some years ago, and even now in many parts of the country, crowds were attracted, not only for religious motives, but for love of gossip and meeting with distant friends These wells have kept their reputation for enturies, the fame of some being coeval with Christianity, while that of others probably preceded it, the early Christian teachers having merely changed the object of wor ship, leaving the alters of idolatry undis
