A MYSTERY SOLVED AFTER SIXTY-SEVEN YEARS.

A DEATH-DEFYING CONFESSION IN A POOR HOUSE EXPLAINS THE FATE OF AARON BURN'S DAUGHTER.

A despatch from Battle Creek, Michigan, announced the death of an old sailor in the poor house at Caspapolis, who, in his last moments told a most remarkable story of the mysterious fate of Aaron Barr's daughter, Theodosia Barr Alston, nearly three-quarters of a century ago.

Mrs. Alston was one of the doomed passengers. She begged to be spared, but her entreaties were unavailing. She dressed herself all in white, and with a Bible in her hand, waited calmly but with a blanched face, for the fatal order.
