And wonder, looking about me vainly for something that would throw the faintest ray of light upon the mystery. But the light did not appear, and so I set myself about rapidly preparing for my sudden departure, having first obtained leave of absence from Mrs. Abbott, and explained that, as most likely her daughter would wish to go, I could accompany her. All this while, as I busied myself about my chamber, I was conscious that the occupant of the room above my own was preparing to leave home.

"You are mistaken, Walter, she does love you," I replied. "She has been hasty even as you have been, but can you not pardon her as you hope to be pardoned?"

"Did you ever love?" he asked quickly, fixing his dark hazel eyes upon my face regardless of the question I had asked him. "And if so, would it have been possible for you to allow such words to fall from your lips as fell from Georgie's this evening?"

"I have loved, Walter, in a quivering voice. 'I loved fervently, and with all the strength of a warm, passionate heart; and more, I spoke just such cruel words to the man I loved as Georgie addressed you this evening. My words were like keen steel. They ran between his heart and mine, severing them forever. That is why my life is a sad and lonely one. Oh, let it be a lesson to you."

"Tears shone in the dark eyes of Walter, and, with a rapid movement, he was by my side, with outstretched hands, saying: 'Oh, Elsie! I have your secret at last. Elsie, dear cousin Elsie, you once loved my cousin Robert. Do not shake your head, I am sure of it; and that is why you are moping your life away here, and why Robert stays away from home so long.'

"Do not speak of this, Walter," I said, eagerly clasping his hands. "If you have any regard for me, do not speak of it to—"

"Whom?" he replied. "I bowed my head. 'It shall be as you wish,' he answered, very thoughtfully.

"And now let us talk of Georgie," I said, anxious to turn the conversation into a new channel. "And what of her?" asked Walter, growing chilly as an iceberg at the mere mention of her name.

"She loves you," I repeated. "That remains to be seen," was the crustily given reply. "And may I prove it to you?" I asked. "Will you allow yourself to be convinced?"

"If I cannot help it, most certainly," was the answer. "And will you trust everything to me, and do as I bid you?"

"Then you may be as happy as you choose, for I am certain of my success," I said. "Walter shook his head moodily, but I saw that there was a new light in his eye, and in spite of his air of unbelief, he really trusted in what I told him. And so we parted.

"I have a letter containing news from Walter Marston, written by a friend of his," I said, in a matter-of-fact tone to Georgie Abbott, as she lingered by my side after lessons were over. "It is very sad, too—very sad. But excuse me, you wish to know something of your French lesson. How many pages did I give you to translate?"

"I looked up from my book as I asked the question. Georgie was clinging hold of a chair, looking as pale as the muslin rose she wore. The pallor of her face frightened me, although I assumed an air of indifference and assured her that the next day's translation was exceedingly easy.

"Will you go up to my room with me?" I asked, rising and locking my desk. "No, no, do not go," she half gasped. "Tell me what you know of Walter."

"Oh, of Walter," said I. "Didn't I finish telling you about him? Why, he says, or rather his friend writes him, that if any of his friends at Somerville House wish to see him they must go to Cadlands at once. That is all."

"All, Miss Herbert?" she cried. "All? Is it not enough in heaven's name? When did you receive the letter?"

"Yesterday morning," I replied. "And are you not going to him?" she asked. "I fear I shall not be able to go," I replied coolly.

"And is this your cousinly love and friendship for him?" said Georgie, "this your sisterly regard that consents into me when he is most in need of your sympathy and kindness? May I be delivered from all such!"

letter to his employers. De Golyer & McClellan, brought out during the investigation, tells what the $5,000 was for, as follows: To-day's and to-night's work has secured the assistance of Gen. Garfield. You can not overstate this accession. He is the Chairman of the Committee of Appropriations and holds the purse strings of the National Treasury. Through him must come every dollar of appropriation, I need not say that I now feel certain of success.

We need not say that Chittenden was right—that the wool pavement swindle was put upon the city of Washington, and that Garfield, as chairman of the House Committee of Appropriations, caused Congress to vote enormous sums from the Federal Treasury to enrich swindlers!

Dr. Browning's Tonic and Alternative is the popular Blood Purifier, etc., because it is made by a regular graduate of medicine is the result of scientific research, is accurately and elegantly compounded, wonderfully efficacious, is taken in very small doses, and is pure, clean, and pleasant to the taste. Fifty cents and $1. For sale by the proprietor, W. Champion Browning, M. D., 1117 Arch Street, Philadelphia, and all druggists.

Garfield a Free Trader. Several Pennsylvania tariff papers state that Gen. Garfield is not opposed to a protective tariff, that the charge is made by Democrats for the purpose of injuring his popularity in this State. Before going into the controversy we will let his own record in and of itself speak.

FROM THE RECORDS OF CONGRESS. When the subject was under consideration in 1870, the Republican nominee for President said: "As an abstract theory of political economy, FREE TRADE has many advocates and much can be said in its favor; nor will it be denied that the scholarship of modern times is largely ON THAT SIDE;—that a large majority of the great thinkers of the present day are leading in the direction of what is called FREE TRADE."

A denial was made by Judge Kelley, of Philadelphia, who read extracts from Henry C. Carey's writings upon protection. Mr. Garfield then added: "I detract nothing from the great ability and the acknowledged fame of Mr. Carey, when I say that on this subject he represents a minority among the financial writers of our day. I am trying to state as fairly as I can the present condition of the question; and in doing so I affirm that the tendency of modern thought is toward FREE TRADE."

This same gentleman, that tariff men in Pennsylvania claim as their friend, advocated a reduction of 82 per cent on pig iron and through his influence in part the reduction was made. We copy from page 703 and 705, Laws of U. S., Part 7, Appendix, 2d Session 41st Congress: "SECTION 51. And it is enacted, That after the first day of December 1869, in lieu of the duties now imposed by law on the articles, hereinafter enumerated or provided for, imported from foreign countries, there shall be levied, collected and paid the following duties and rates of duties, that is to say:

On iron in pigs seven dollars per ton. On cast scrap iron of every description six dollars per ton. On wrought scrap iron eight dollars per ton. Garfield's vote in favor of this great reduction of the tariff of 1842 and 1864, will be found on page 4108, Part 5, and again on page 5622 Congressional Globe, Part 5, 2d Session 41st Congress.

In 1872 the records prove that Gen. Garfield's views remained unchanged as he voted yes on the following section, making a still further reduction on iron and steel. SECTION 2.—That on and after the 1st day of August, 1872 in lieu of the duties imposed by law on the articles in this section enumerated, there shall be levied, collected and paid on the goods, wares, and all merchandise in this section enumerated and provided for, imported from foreign countries, ninety per centum of the several duties and rates of duty now imposed by law upon said articles severally, IT BEING THE INTENT OF THIS SECTION TO REDUCE EXISTING DUTIES OF SAID ARTICLES TEN PER CENTUM OF SUCH DUTIES, that is to say:

On all wools. On all iron and steel, and on all manufactures of iron and steel, of which metals or either of them shall be the component part of chief value, excepting cotton machinery. No wonder such ardent protective tariff men as Errett and Bayne refuse, when Garfield was the Republican candidate for Speaker of Congress, to vote for him! Will they show their consistency now, and refuse to help him carry Pennsylvania next November.

In making this statement we are not going into the merits of the tariff question. The object is to show that the Republicans profess to be protective tariff men, and so declare in State and national platform, while such a principle is set aside and a free trader placed in nomination for the highest office in the gift of the people. These extracts are from the Congressional record and can not be successfully denied. When a Republican professes to be a friend of protection, refer him to the proceedings of Congress.

In face of the official record to the contrary, Gov. Foster has assurance to say that he "regards Garfield as one of the ablest and most practical of the advocates of a protective tariff."

"My child was affected in the same manner as yours, Mrs. B. and Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup gave it immediate relief, I would surely give it a trial!" Before Jon Jefferson started off on his fishing excursion he went before a justice of the peace and took a solemn oath that he would not lie about the size or number of fish he might hook.

YELLOW FEVER.—To ameliorate the dreadful effects of Yellow Fever take Simons' Liver Regulator. Let it be given in large doses that it may have an immediate effect upon the liver, and remove the accumulating bile. It so acts upon the liver, stomach and blood as to prevent the attack of this terrible disease.

History of the Presidential Elections Since the Formation of the Government. Upon the adoption of the Federal constitution George Washington was elected the first President thereunder by a unanimous vote of the people and re-elected for a second term by a nearly unanimous vote. During his second term strong opposition grew up in Congress against his administration, which was crystallized into what was then known as the Republican party, of which Thomas Jefferson was chosen the leader. John Adams was the leader of the Federalists. The two by common consent in 1800 became the opposing candidates for President. Mr. Adams was chosen President, and Jefferson became vice-President, he having received the next highest number as the electoral vote.

In 1804 a Congressional caucus nominated Thomas Jefferson for vice-President and Aaron Burr for vice-President on the Republican or Democratic ticket. They were elected over John Adams and Charles C. Pinckney, the candidates for the Federalists.

In 1804 Thomas Jefferson was re-elected President and George Clinton running on the same ticket was elected vice-President. The opposing candidates this year were Charles C. Pinckney for President and Rufus King for vice-President.

In 1808 James Madison was elected President by an overwhelming majority over Charles C. Pinckney. In 1812 Mr. Madison was nominated for re-election by a Congressional caucus and elected over De Witt Clinton the opposition candidate.

In 1816 the Democratic congressional caucus nominated James Monroe and he was elected against Rufus King, the candidate of the Federalists. In 1820 Mr. Monroe was re-elected without opposition. The only instance that a President of the United States was elected without opposition either before or since that time, save Washington at his first election.

In 1824 the Democrats emboldened by not having an opposing candidate against them four years before, placed in nomination by legislative and other machinery not less than four candidates, viz: William H. Crawford, Andrew Jackson, Henry Clay and John Quincy Adams. This scrabble resulted in no election by the people, and the House of Representatives elected Mr. Adams President, and John C. Calhoun vice President.

In 1828 Andrew Jackson became the Democratic candidate and was elected over Mr. Adams, the candidate opposed to him. Mr. Calhoun was re-elected vice President. In 1832 there were three tickets in the field, viz: The Democratic or Jackson party, headed by Andrew Jackson for President, and Martin VanBuren for vice-President, who were elected. The National Republican party was headed by Henry Clay for President. The U. S. Anti-Masonic party, with William Wirt as the candidate for President, and Amos Elmker for vice-President.

In 1836 Martin VanBuren and Richard M. Johnson, the Democratic candidates, were elected over William Henry Harrison, and Hugh L. White, the opposition. In 1840 there were again three tickets in the field, viz: James G. Birney and Francis Pickens, the Abolition candidates, Martin J. Van Buren, the Democratic candidate. The convention that nominated Van Buren made no nomination for vice-President, but left the matter to the electoral college. The Whigs re-nominated General Harrison and he with John Tyler were elected President and Vice-President.

In 1844 the Whigs nominated Henry Clay and Theodore Tilton. The Liberty party nominated James G. Birney and Thomas Morris. The Democrats nominated James K. Polk and George M. Dallas, and they were elected. In 1848 the Democrats nominated Lewis Cass and William O. Butler. A portion of the Democracy refused to abide by the nomination, and Martin Van Buren was nominated for President and Charles Francis Adams for vice-President. The Whigs nominated Zachary Taylor and Millard Fillmore, and they were elected.

In 1852 the Whigs nominated General Winfield Scott and Wm. A. Graham. The Free soil Democrats nominated John P. Hale and George W. Julian. The Democrats nominated and elected Franklin Pierce and William R. King. In 1856 the Republican convention nominated John C. Fremont and William L. Dayton. The American party nominated Millard Fillmore and A. J. Donelson. The Democrats nominated and elected James Buchanan and John C. Breckinridge.

In 1860 four tickets were in the field. The Constitutional Union party nominated John Bell and Edward Everett. The Democratic party split and the northern wing nominated and supported Stephen A. Douglas and Herschell V. Johnson and the southern wing John C. Breckinridge and Joseph Lane. The Republican party nominated and elected Abraham Lincoln and Hannibal Hamlin.

In 1864 the Republicans re-elected Lincoln and Andrew Johnson vice-President over George R. McClellan and George H. Pendleton, the Democratic candidates. In 1868 the Republicans elected Gen. U. S. Grant and Schuyler Colfax over Horatio Seymour and Frank P. Blair, the Democratic candidates.

In 1872 Gen. U. S. Grant was re-elected with Henry Wilson for vice-President over Horace Greeley and B. Gratz Brown, the Democratic and Liberal Republican candidates. In 1876 the Democrats nominated and elected Samuel J. Tilden and William A. Wheeler, the Republican candidates, but by one of the most stupendous crimes known to history, they were defeated out of their rights by a set of political scoundrels, who it is hoped will get their just deserts after the 4th of March, next, when the Democratic President of the United States will be inaugurated just as certain as a Providence rules human destinies, and let this prediction not be forgotten.
