

Hiptala's Harem. ARRIVED IN NEW YORK WITH FOUR WIVES ARRIVED IN WONDERFUL ATTIRE.

There arrived in New York, lately, on the Inman steamship City of Brussels, from Liverpool, Mr. Escoffery Hiptala, a Bombay merchant prince of almost ungodly wealth, who brings with him four native wives, Veerabai, Allah Bani, Yhanjan and Ombada. These were in charge of a...

A Wonderful Idiot. An idiot who, perhaps, surpasses all rivals in memory, and in the capacity to make mathematical calculations in his head, was recently examined before the students of the medico-surgical academy of St. Petersburg. He is 27 years old. In his youth he was noted for his high intelligence, but was afflicted with the immoderate use of liquors, and died a diseased life. He was attacked by an acute disease. When he recovered he was found to have lost all his mental faculties except memory and the power of mathematical calculation. These increased proportionately as his intelligence and power of logical thinking diminished. Now he is a living phorograph and calculating apparatus. In the lecture room Professor Morjevsky requested him to square numbers containing five or six figures, to extract the square roots of all like numbers and so on. All the questions were correctly answered by the patient in a few seconds. No mathematical problem could do anything like it. Then the Professor requested some one to read poetry aloud for several minutes, and the patient recited it as correctly as a phorograph. The professor declared to the audience that he was unable to explain the physical phenomenon. The memory and the calculating capacity of the patient are still growing, while in other respects he is becoming a more hopeless idiot.

A Thirsty Crowd. A good story is told of one of the most prominent members of the Brooklyn Yacht Club. During the summer he entertained a party of friends on board his beautiful schooner in his usual economical manner. As the guests sat in the cabin, refreshed only by his sparkling conversation, one of them observed a small hanging from a bracket. "What," said the guest, "is that?" "That," said the host, "is an electric bell, which communicates instantaneously with the steward. The guest did so, and amid a general clearing of throats and brightening of eyes. The steward at once responded: "But there fell upon the thirsty and exhausted party a worse than Arabian drought when the gallant yachtman ordered a glass of water, Johnson."
