THE FARRAGUT STATUE-

The bronze statue of the late Admiral David P. Farragut, was unveiled in Washington on Morday, with suitable ceremonies. The President made a brief speech, accepting the statue in the name of the nation. Addresses were deliver ed by ex-Postmaster General Maynard and Hon. Daniel W. Voorhees. The crease. statue was crected by order of Congress; and Mrs. Vinnie Ream Hoxie is the sculptor. It is colossal in size, and was cast from the blades of the propellor of the United States steamship Hartford, the vessel that bore Admiral Farragut's flag in his operations against southern ports during the rebellion. It rests upon a granite base about eighteen feet mandamus to all State officers. The high. There was an exciting passage-at arms in the House at Harrisburg on Monday, between Speaker Hewit and Hon. Chas. S. Mr. Wolfe fiercely denounced the Speaker as "an abettor of indicate the speaker as "an abettor of indindindicate the speaker as "an abettor of indicate the speak ringsters," and declined to withdraw the expression, as "his duty to the people of the Commonwealth would not permit him to change his opinion." "If this severed their personal friendship he could not help it." All of which goes to show how injudicious it is for statesmen to men. The time seems to have come formulate their estimates of one another.

BRADY'S DOWNFALL.

It has long been an open secret that there were scandalous frauds in connection with what is known as the star mail routes. A year or more ago it was an nounced by General Brady, Second As sistant Postmaster General, that there was a deficiency of $2,000,000 in this was a deliciency of $2,000,000 in this sassination of the late Czar, was a young branch of the service. Investigation brought to light the fact that in 93 out of more than 900 star routes, the pay had been increased from $700,000 to $2,800, been 000. By this enormous increase, certain favored parties pocketed vast sums of money. A subservient Congress actually granted Brady's insolent demand for an appropriation to meet this deficiency. Uunder Hayes' administration nothing was done to check this rascality. An investigation was undertaken but came to naught, and the belief became general that members of Congress were implicated with the post-office authorities. When Mr. James became Postmaster General he collected such evidence as led to the prompt dismissal of Brady. The subject should not be dropped here. There are other men of high standing who should be arraigned for their participation in this gigantic scheme of plunder, and all connected therewith should be tried and punished. It is high time that rottenness in public stations should be punished and which also came to nonght because it formally repealed another law which if members of Congross are implicated in frauds they should fare no better than more vulgar rascals. The people have grown weary of the peculations of public efficials and disgusted with their
