Mr. Riddell remained silent, but the blood mounted to his brow.

Said Mrs. Trentham to Captain Hornblower, at a little supper table in a fashionable restaurant.

At 6 o'clock that morning a young Swiss maid, by name Marie Hartzel, had gone on a large steamer.

"Himmel!" exclaimed Marie, and sped away like a whirlwind.

Fritz happened to be polishing the rows of little tables placed in bowers of evergreen.

Marie said a few words of feminine vanity while yielding to logical argument and nudged home with her basket.

Finally the Jew took the trinket to a fashionable jeweler for skillful workmanship in metals.

"What shall it be?" retorted Augusta Bevan joyfully.

"My children, remember the Scotch proverb, 'Those who fish for minnows never catch trout.'"

FRIGHTFUL CALAMITY. SINKING OF A "PLEASANT" STEAMER. A dispatch from London, Ontario, dated May 24th, gives the following account of the sinking of the steamer Victoria.

"It was the first day of the season for the excursion boats to run regular trips and the first time taken in connection with the public holiday (the Queen's birthday), naturally drew large crowds of pleasure-seekers to the river.

About four o'clock in the afternoon, the steamer Victoria, of the Thames Navigation Company Line, started from the dock at London, with her full complement of passengers.

The vessel was crowded with passengers, and the water was very rough.

"Himmel!" exclaimed Marie, and sped away like a whirlwind.
