A. Clark is spending a few days in the minnow. The bass seizes the minnow by darting at it and generally carries it five or six feet Misses Ada and May Brower are visiting before it overcomes the force of the rush, when he stops until he gets the head foremost, an opration which occupies a full minute. As soon Col. Freeze was obliged to return home from as the bass gets the minnow swallowed, or well on its way, he starts off in search of other food.

The angler should not jetk his line as soon as he sees that a fish has struck his bait, but should give him line until he comes to a stop. Then make a short, quick strike, so that if you do not book the fish the bait will not be removed from him more than a foot or so, as in case of a miss the chances are that the fish will seize but he is now well enough to attend to some of the bait again. If fishing without a float and you miss striking the fish, let the bait settle to the bottom; and the fish will think he has killed the minrow, and in nine cases out of ten will go for it again. In baiting with crabs week. He has many cordiat frierds here who it is a good plan to break off one of the pinchers, so that the crab is partially disabled and cannot ernwl under roots or stones, and thus hide itself or get the book fast. The black bass will soldom take the crab bait when it's off the bottom, as the fish does not seem to know what it is swimming about in the water. In fishing with crabs, it is perhaps best to do without the fleat, and the red may also be dispensed with if desired. To put the crah on the book, insert the hock on the under sides through the second wrinkle of the tail from the body, allowing the hook to come out the tail on the back. Throw the bait out as far as possible and let it settle to the bottom. The bass seizes the crab as he does the minnow, but does not go so far after taking before he stops, when he torns it about until he gets it tail first. Make the strike when the bas starts to swim off. In all kinds of fishing the finer the quality of tackle used the better. Play your fish carefully and do not hurry.
