Cows are generally milked twice a day, sometimes oftener, but twice is enough udder is found of insufficient capacity to hold it. The time required to milk will vary with the circumstances. When and where milking is done for transportation to some distant market early milk ing in the morning is necessary, should be done regularly, whether is earlier or later. As a rule no milker should be required to milk more than twelve cows morning and evening; some can milk fifteen cows, but generally one arms and hands get tired by the time twelve cows are milked. The time for milking a cow must vary according to conditions; one cow may be milked i four minutes, while another may require fifteen or twenty minutes in order to be milked thoroughly clean. If milking is not carefully, regularly and thoroughly done, the quality of milk produced will be daily diminished. If any is left in the udder it tends to dry the cow or shrink her daily yield of milk. Great care must therefore be exercised in this regard. The strippings increase the quantity of cream not only, but the flavor and quality of the butter also. Read the folquality of the butter also. Read the following statements: "We filled several up the stamp that the moisture is absorbed and the stamp slides off the enlarge teacups of the same size," said Dr. Anderson, of Bath, England, "commencing with milk at the beginning of the milking and others at regular intervals, till the last, which was filled with the strippings or strokings. These were severally weighed so as to ascertain that velope flies open, and, after three minthe quantity of it was the same, and af utes delay she has pass her tongue along ter repeating this experiment a number of times with different cows, the results were stated as follows: The quantity of cream for the first draw cup was in every case much inferior and smaller than that from the cup last drawn, those Will it go to Chicago without the name were nearer the beginning or the end. In the case of some cows the variation of cream from the first cup to the last was difference in quality was much greater than in quantity. In the first cup the cream was thin, and in the last cup the cream was thicker and richer in color, more so than any other. The difference after the cream was off was greater than either in respect to the quantity and quality of the cream. The milk of the first cap was thin and bluish, as if a large proportion was water, while that of the large proportion was water, while that of the large proportion was of a thick consisten. at the superscription. cream than of milk, both in appearance and taste A little mess fed to a cow while milking has a good effect, and she meanwhile yields her milk more freely. As nearly as possible, observe twelve hours between milking, a rule of more importance than at first might seem to a carcless milker. Raise More Sheep.

up, and in the more hilly and rocky parts land. Rockhill, Milford, Springfield and Haycock. Wherever the ground is rolling or hilly and dry, sheep will do excellently well, and may be raised quite profitably when the price of the wool and the mutton are considered. The greatest drawback is the number of dogs and their disposition to attack the sheep. But there are too many dogs and too few sheep; if the one kind of stock could be very largely thinned off, the other and much more profitable kind could be more accessfully kept.

There are so few sheep in the country and so few people seem to be willing to keep and handle them that it will probably be a long time before much attention to them, even in districts where they would be remunerative and profitable. The steady advance in the price of meat will cause some farmers to look into mutton raising after a while because there is evidently a profit in it, and on steep, hilly rocky land there is more money in sheep than any kind of live stock on the farm, and much less work than in the dairy.

Buying a Horse.

In buying a horse, says "Turf, Field and Farm," look first to his head and eyes for signs of intelligence, temper, courage and honesty. Unless a horse has brains you cannot teach him to do anything well. If bad qualities prevail in a horse, education only serves to enlarge and intensify them. The head is the in dicator of disposition in the horse, A square muzzle with large nostrils evidences an ample breathing apparatus and great lung power. Next, see that he is well cut under the jowl, with jaw bones broad and wide apart under the throttle. Breadth and fullness between the ears and eyes is always desirable The eye should be full and hazle in color ears small and thin and thrown well for ward. The horse that turns his ears back until they almost meet at the point is not to be trusted. He is a biter or a kicker, and is sure to be vicious in other respects. A horse with a dashing face is cowardly, and a cowardly brute being naturally vicious, can never be trained to anything well. A horse with a rounding nose, tapering forehead and a broad, full place below the eyes is always treacherous and mischievous. Avoid a long-legged, stilty horse. Select one with a short, straight back and rump, withers high and sloping, well set back and broad, with good depth of chest, fore legs short, hind legs straight with the hocks low down, short pastern joints and a round, mulish foot By observ ing the above hints a horse may be se lected that is graceful, good-natured, serviceable and a prize to the owner.

The Origin of Mustard.

Before the year 1729 mustard was little known at English tables. About this time an old woman of the name of Clements, residing in Durham, began to grind the seed in a mill and to pass the lour through several processes necessary to free it from its husks. She kept her secret to herself for many years, during which she sold quantities of mustard throughout the country, but especially in London. Here it was introduced to the Royal table, where it received the approval of George I. From the circumstance of Mrs. Clements being a resident at Durham, it obtained the name of Durham mustard. The manufacture of mustard consisted in simply grinding the seeds into very fine flour, a bushel of seed weighing sixty pounds yielding twentyeight pounds to thirty pounds of flour of mustard. A false taste, however, arose for having an improved color, and the flour of mustard was introduced from which the oil had been abstracted. Hence other materials, such as capsicum powder, turneric, terra alba, wheaten flour, etc., are added to bring up the flavor and to increase the bulk to brown. Journal
