tered the open door almost unnoticed. Then I saw Amice as she stood in her soft gray gown with her beautiful head drooping on to her breast. I only looked at her for a moment, and the sight gave me courage. I was not living should harm her while I lived to prevent it, but my task was a hard one for all that. Stepping forward through the little crowd of villagers that looked on, open-mouthed, to see me, I made my way toward the group in the chancel.

"Come in, Paul," she said, holding out her hand towards me. "You're as tired as I am, I'm sure." Just the same welcome as ever; but there was something in the ring of her voice that I couldn't altogether understand. I thought so. However, sitting down on the porch, I stopped on for some little time, making her tell me all the gossip of the village. Of course, the arrival of the soldiers came up among other things, and by the flush that overpowered the girl's pale cheek, as she told me this bit of news, I felt sure that the mischief was done, and that Amice Ryder was heart whole no longer.

"Did your soldier give you that rose, my lass?" he asked suddenly. "For the love of my life I would have Amice angry. She did not give me any answer to my question, but rising from her seat, she turned abruptly away and hid herself in the house, getting some freshments ready for me, which I hardly deserved after my impertinence."

"What do you want now?" he gasped out. "Only to let you know that I am here, and can give the game that you are playing," I returned. "As long as you remember that, you're safe from me. For a moment she looked out a little anxiously; then said, quickly: "Yes, that's him, Paul."

"Come home with us, Paul," she said gently. "I want you." And notwithstanding the queer looks given me by her soldier, I followed them at a distance toward the old home.

"Oh, you silly old Paul," she said, blushing slightly as that all you've been making such a mystery about? Well—yes, I promise."

"I looked at her earnestly. "Amice," I said, "you've given me your promise, and I trust you. Whatever persuasion you may get to the contrary, you give me your honest word that old Paul, the peddler, shall come to your wedding!"

"That's what I said, really and truly." "And then I was satisfied, for I knew a girl with such truthful eyes as hers couldn't stoop to deceit."

"For what reason am I to stop?" said old Paul to Leigh, who was arranging them, started by my voice, and not knowing how to act.

"Because," I said, covering my eyes with my hands, to shut Amice's face from my sight, "because that man is my son, and he's married already!"

"It's just a downright lie, sir," he said, simply enough, "and I'm not to pry into my father's house to speak for himself, and Heaven knows why any one should want to see between Amice and me like this."

"I looked up bewildered as the man spoke, and then in an instant the awful mistake I had made flashed across my mind; this was not the man I had seen coming up to Ben Ryder's house at all; this was not my son, but a younger man, but different in every way to that poor wandering fellow. For a minute some thing seemed to come into my throat and I could not speak a word. But presently the words came: "I will draw what I said entirely, sir," I said, solemnly, "and I humbly ask pardon for the mistake I made, which I will explain later on."

"Come home with us, Paul," she said gently. "I want you." And notwithstanding the queer looks given me by her soldier, I followed them at a distance toward the old home.

Some Odd Accidents.

At Pine Bluff, Ark., a sheriff's posse surrounded the residence of a desperate thief. He jumped from a window and ran to the woods. One pursued and stripped his fellows, and the next few minutes mistook him for the thief and shot him.

At Canton, O., James Little, drank some cold beer, which paralyzed his stomach, and forming carbonic acid gas in his whole system, causing nearly instantaneous death.

At Eastport, Me., a sailor wanting a drink of water, and finding the cask pump frozen, poured hot water into it, and then, when the steam and water came out, inhaled the steam and was scalded to death.

At St. Louis, Thomas J. Wharton, jr., took up a large oyster, said: "This is the best of oysters I ever had," and choked to death on it.

At Indianapolis, the weight of a cask of water smashed the teeth of a man who was carrying it on his back, and falling on his breast it crushed him to death.

At Boston, Simon Long, while playing with his ball, was struck on the head by a brick, and fell against the wall and broke his neck.

At Dublin, Ga., a chimney swallow filled the muzzle of William Sugg's gun with clay and when he discharged it the weapon flew out of his hand.

At Newburgh, N. Y., Albert Grant was playing with a Newfoundland dog and dragging it by the tail, when it jumped into the pond, pulling him in, and he was drowned.

Odd Items.

It will generally cure a poet to play on him with a hose pipe if he has too much fire in his eye.

I am a Baptist Minister, and before I even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but lost a lucrative practice for my present profession, 40 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy; Thomas Electric Oil cured me. I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas Electric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria, and Thomas Electric Oil cured them, and if taken in time, it will cure seven times out of ten. It is positive it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough; if any one will take a small teaspoon and half fill it with the oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the oil out of the spoon into the head by sniffing as hard as they can, until the oil falls over into the throat, and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure them of any catarrh of the throat, and earache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge. It is the only medicine I have ever felt recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you, if you would not be without it in your house, it will cure you of any cold or croup, and if taken in time, it will cure seven times out of ten. It is the only medicine I have ever felt recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you, if you would not be without it in your house, it will cure you of any cold or croup, and if taken in time, it will cure seven times out of ten. It is positive it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough; if any one will take a small teaspoon and half fill it with the oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the oil out of the spoon into the head by sniffing as hard as they can, until the oil falls over into the throat, and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure them of any catarrh of the throat, and earache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge.
