When Andrew Jackson was President, the whiskey jug was handed around at the White House, but in the present enlightened age the guests at the Execu-tive Mansion are furnished with seven different kinds of wine at dinner. Truly this is an age of progress.

Judge Advocate General Swaim has made his report, in which he declares the made his report, in which he declares the sentence of Sergeant Mason to be invalid, because of irregularities in the Court martial. Petitions to the President may as well stop until it is ascertained whether Mason has been guilty of anything for which he ought to be pardoned.

George W. Scoville has finally retired from the Guiteau case. He says the abuse heaped upon him by his brother-in-law is more than he can endure, and he now leaves the assassin to his fate. No other attorney has as yet consented to argue the bill of exceptions to the court in banc. Guiteau will probably have it all to himself.

There is a strong opposition among Republican lawyers of Philadelphia, to the re election of Judge Briggs of Com-mon Pleas No. 4 of that city. Just what Judge Briggs has been doing does not appear, but he seems to have a good many friends who want to continue him in office, and a large number of enemies who would like to defeat him.

Congressman Joe Scranton delivers the Lackawanna delegation to the Re-publican State convention to Don Cameron, and in accordance with the bargain, the Senator promptly has Scran-ton's man confirmed as postmaster at Wilkes-barre. The next thing in order is for Orr to give Cameron the Luzerne the goods.

Gen. Beaver, the machine candidate for governor, will most likely be nomin-ated by the Republican convention. This will cause the nomination of an independent by the Wolfe faction. With Hon. S. P. Wolverton as our candidate, the Democratic party would be sure to win. The State convention must not give us an old broken down, office seek-

He said that he thought he had done Fitz John Porter an injustice for many years, and that he was de-termined to do now what he could to re-store him to his old place in the army. General Grant called out a good many Senators and spoke very earnestly to all of them upon the same subject. There is no bill now before the Senate for the restoration of Porter, but it is inferred one will soon be introduced for his relief.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born at Portland, Maine, on the 27th of February, 1807. His father, the Hon. Stephen Longfellow, was a native of Newbury, Mass. The grandfather of Stephen Longfellow was born in Hamp-shire county, England, about the year 1651. He came in early life to New-bury, where he married Annie Sewall, a sister of Chief Justice Sewall. He was drowned in the Gulf of St. Lawrence Mason, who is now in the Albany penitentary under a sentence of eight years, for shooting at Guiteau.

Their son, the poet, was born nearly three years later. His early days were passed in his native city, where he attended the public schools. In 1821 the young man entered Bowdoin college and was graduated therefrom four years later. His earliest known poetical attempts were some stanzas on Venice which he wrote at the age of thirteen. After leaving college he studied law for a few months in his father's office, but as this was an uncongenial pursuit he gladly accepted the offer of the position of professor of modern languages at Bowdoin. In order to qualify himself for the duties which this office required he spent three years and a helf traveling about 15 cm.

this office required he spent three years and a half traveling abroad, visiting France, Spain, Italy, Germany, Holland and England for this purpose. He came home in 1829, and began his professorship at Bowdoin, which continued until 1835, when the death of Mr. George Ticknor, who held the corres ponding position in Harvard university, resulted in his accepting the vacant professorship in that eminent seat of learn.

to live at Cambridge, in the house once occupied by Washington. In 1868-9 he made his fourth trip to Europe, and was everywhere received with marked honors, among others that of D. C. L. of Oxford being conferred upon him. Harvard university had already made him L. L. The Chinese must go. The President will repeat the state of the state The Chinese must go. The President will probably sign the bill, which prohibits any further immigration from China for the next twenty years. A prominent Republican Senator in speakof the bill a few days ago, said: I have been to the state department and talked with the officials there, and I have no earthly doubt but that China will abrogate the treaty now existing between the two countries, and that American merchants, both at home and in China, chants, both at home and in China, will be made to feel with telling force the folly of excluding the Chinese from the United States for the next twenty years. If this limit had been fixed at five or ten years, and at the end of that time it was deemed desirable to continue it longer, I am sure China would have offered no serious opposition, but now we slap China square in the face and tell her sin substance that we don't care anything about our treaty stipulation. I predict that within three years that the pressure will be so great upon congress by the mercantile interests of this country, in connecquence of injury inflicted by having no treaty with China, that the present will not only be amended but we will be compelled to give China better terms than would be necessary now.
