Corn in Hills or Drills.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman writes: "As the result of twenty years of experience and observation, I am decidedly in favor of hill planting. Both methods are practised here to some extent, but planting in drills is not done so much now as four or five years ago. In this section the yield of measured bushels of ears per acre will be about the same by either method; but the ears that are grown by planting in hills are longer, the grain better developed, and consequently heavier, giving about ten per cent more shelled corn by weight than that grown by the other method. On the other hand, more stalks will be grown by planting in drills; but in our cornfields the grain is the main object, and we think it is better, if we are likely to need more fodder than we get with our crop, to devote a portion of land exclusively to the raising of fodder-corn.

"There is one other point to be considered—the labor question. Very little hand labor is required in corn after it is planted, if we have good horse implements, and good workmen to handle them, rowed both ways, while in the other case much hoeing is needed if the fields are kept clean. Good culture is necessary if you want a good crop of corn, and to have the land in good condition for barley the following year. In western-central Missouri, where I sojourned for three seasons, the verdict of the best farmers was to the effect that planting in rows both ways produced about ten per cent more corn, with two-thirds to three-fourths of the labor required in drill-planting."

USE YOUR BONES.—The Agriculturist says: "Bones accumulate on every farm, and a hunt for them will bring out many more than one would expect to find. When properly treated, they furnish very valuable food for growing plants. Whole bones, as they are thrown out from the kitchen, are so slowly decomposed, that they are of little use, unless applied very largely. They need to be broken up or made fine in some way that the large amount of phosphoric acid, etc., contained in them may be available. It is not practicable for ordinary farmers to have bone mills, and the next best thing is to break them up somewhat with an axe or heavy hammer, and mix them with unleached ashes, keeping the heap moist enough so the alkali will "eat" them, and render the bones soft. The bones thus treated will crumble to fine pieces when dried, and are then ready to be spread upon the land. Every farmer should see that all bones are thus made into a valuable home-made fertilizer."

A Few Problems.

What velocity must a locomotive have to pick up a deaf man walking on the track and fling him so high that six cars pass before he comes down?

A boy earned twenty cents per day for eighteen days, and bought his mother a mush-rat muff costing $2.10. How much did he have left to go to the circus with?

A farmer sold eleven bushels of potatoes and the product purchased two gallons of whiskey at ninety cents per gallon. How much per bushel did he get for his tubers, and where did he keep the jug?

A mother standing at the gate calls to her boy who is exactly sixty-eight feet distant. It takes two minutes and sixty-eight seconds for the sound to reach him. Find from this the velocity with which a woman's voice travels.

A woman earned forty-two cents per day by washing, and supported a husband who consumed four dollars' worth of provisions per week. How much was she in debt at the end of each month up to the time he was sent to the work house?

A father agreed to give his son four and one-half acres of land for every cord of wood he chopped. The son chopped three seventhsths of a cord and broke the ax and went off hunting rabbits. How much land was he entitled to?—Detroit Free Press.

Owners of real estate along the New Jersey coast may perhaps be led to reflect, by the annual report of Prof. Cooke, the State Geologist, on the vanity of laying up to themselves riches where the surf and tide encroach, and where the sea breaks through and steals. From Sandy Hook all the way to Cape May, he says, the shore has been steadily worn away for a century. At Shrewsbury inlet the water line has moved inland from 165 to 330 feet since 1853; at one part of Long Branch, 375 feet; and opposite Whale Pond, 525 feet. It is known that about the year 1700 the line near a part of Cape May extended more than a thousand feet further out than now; while at Cape Island the shore has been worn off fully a mile during much less than a century. There is evidence not only of the attrition of the waves, but of the general rise in the high water level. Dead trees in great numbers are found standing in the tide marshes all along the coast; it is obvious that the great salt meadows between Newark and Jersey City were once arable uplands; islands have disappeared under the water—one, in Elsenborough, which contained ten acres of good farm land as late as 1865, being now utterly submerged; Money Island has also gone, and so has Round Island, which had forty acres of upland in 1803. New Jersey never was among the larger States, but it is evidently destined to become smaller, as well as to illustrate, by its fate how the contours of continents change in the ages.

Frederick Chopin.

It is related of Fredrick Chopin that his power with the pianoforte was such that he could hush the pupils of his father's school even in their most unruly moments. One day when Professor Chopin was out, there was a frightful scene. Barcinki, the master present, was at his wit's end, when Fredrick, we are told, happily entered the room. Without deliberation, he requested the boysterers to sit down, and called in those who were making a noise outside and promised to improvise an interesting story on the piano if they would be quiet. All were instantly as still as death, and Fredrick sat down to the instrument and extinguished the lights. He described the manner in which robbers approached a house, mounted by ladders to the windows, but were frightened away by a noise within. Without delay they fled into the wood, where they fell asleep under the starry sky. He played more and more softly, as if trying to lull children to rest, till he found that his hearers had actually fallen asleep. —From the Paris Register.
