POETICAL.

THE TIME MAY BE

BY JENNIE JONES CUNEINGHAM The time may come when I shall fade From out thy life, a leaf decayed, That drops from off the wild-wood tree, Nor leaves a trace the eye may see. Where it had hung in summer's pride, Before it withered, drooped and died And where another budding spring

To take its place a leaf will brim The time may be when I shall glide A noonday's shadow from thy side, Just like the ones the beavens cast On streams, where fleecy clouds have past One moment seen, and then they are not— Their tender outlines all forgot; And so thy memory, like a dream, May pass from of thy life's fair stream

The time may come when I shall pass Prom out thy heart, as o'er this glass, Before me now, my hand or face I may withdraw, nor leave a trace, To tell that once I singered there, Where others come to smile more fair, To charm the heart, that now to me Is more than heaven e'er can be, The time may be when I shall go, A meited flake of fallen snow— A morning's mist—a meteor driven Across the winter's midnight heaven—

In darkness lost, where still may shine

The brighter star o'er paths of thine -That, when my eyes are closed in dust, The time may be when I shall fade From out thy thoughts—all things are mad The creatures of an hour—and death The end of all. Ah! vain the breath That pleads for aught to stay or save One human hope from out the grave — Where I must go and be forgot — To sleep in some neglected spot.

A Dakota Yarn.

"Yes, sir," resumed the Dakota man, as a crowd of agriculturists seated themsentiment of generosity toward the selves around a fittle table; "yes, sir, we do things on rather a sizable scale. I've seen a man on one of our big farms start out in the spring and plough a furrow until fall. Then he turned around and harvested back. We have some big farms up there, gentlemen. A ister to some of his fellow evangelists, "I never was guilty of laughing in the had a mortgage, and the mortgage was

Two years ago I saw a whole family prostrated with grief. Women yelling, children howling and dogs barking. One of my men had his camp truck pakeed on seven four-mule teams, and he was around bidding every body good-by." "Where was he going? asked a Gravesend man. "He was going half way across the farm to feed the pigs," replied the Dakota man.
"And did he ever get back to his family again?" "It isn't time for him yet," replied the Dakota man.

NEARLY & MIRACLE. E. Asenith Hall, Binghampton, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for several months with a dull pain through left img and shoulders. I lost my spirits, appetite and color, and could with difculty keep up all day. My mother prescured some Burdock Blood Bitters. I took them as directed, and have felt no pain since first week after using them, and am now quite well." Price

Gold fish inhabit the Delaware, below Easton, in large numbers, and are often taken in the nets of fisherman.
