Ask some men for an advertisement, and they will answer: "I don't believe in advertising. Nobody reads your paper." But let the same man be caught kissing his neighbor's wife or trying to hold up a street light, and his tone changes immediately; and if a newspaper office is in the glare of a seven-story building he will clamor to the top and beg the editor to keep the affair out of the paper, as all of his acquaintances in the seven counties would get to it.

On Tuesday last, the 29th of June, the great combination shows of Barrett & Co. appeared in Catawissa. People had come from all sections to see the grand street parade—nor were they disappointed in this. The display of chariots and cages was much more than is usually seen, and the horses were the finest perhaps ever seen with any show. The managers make great efforts to bring every department of their show up to the highest standard. Mr. Willis Cobb the press agent is a perfect gentleman in every respect and wins hosts of friends wherever he goes. His aim is to make every one comfortable, and prevent if possible all roystering in or about the massive tents.
This is but the second year for this vast combination, and this is its first trip through Pennsylvania. They are giving satisfaction wherever they exhibit and should they return again will be well paid for their labor in bringing their show to so high a standard.
The Town council and the water company cannot agree on terms for a public water supply, and for that reason the plugs have been cut off from the mains and the town is now at the mercy of the flames. The water company asks $1,000 a year for five years, and the council has offered $800 for one year. There is not so much difference between them but the matter can be adjusted, and the law provides an easy remedy. Where any taxpayer thinks that the town is paying too much for water he can appeal to a court by a bill in equity and the whole subject can be brought up, and after a full hearing the court can reduce the charges or dismiss the bill. It has no power to increase the price. The water company has expressed its willingness to submit the case in this manner, and the council ought to meet them half way. The present condition of things is not only painful for all property owners, but is injurious to the prosperity of our town. No capitalist will invest here and very few new-comers will be expected to make their home so long as the fire protection is cut off.
The following card was published by the county commissioners in last week's issues of the Republican and Sentinel.
TO THE PEOPLE OF COLUMBIA COUNTY:—Justice demands that we the undersigned answer the calumny cast upon our motives, in the last issue of the Oshonobee, because of our refusal to decide for a careful and energetic administration of all the facts and circumstances that the county would be better served, in the shortest time, with better workmanship and material, and get the most for the money, under the bid of H. F. Hawke and Co., in building the proposed addition to the Court House, than from any other bid, although several hundred dollars above others. So far as we acted in the case we did as we believed then and now, purely for the best interests of the county, without offer of or consent to favor, and whether or not the building will be erected by the present board is a question for further and grave consideration.
CHARLES BENTLEY, JUDGE OF THE COUNTY.
JOSEPH FREEMAN, COMMISSIONER.
B. F. EDGELL, CLERK.
June 13th, 1882.
We admit without hesitation all the statements made in this card, except one, and that is that the County does not contain anything like calumny. The definition of this word is "the false accusation of a crime or offense, knowingly or maliciously made or reported, to the injury of another; false representation of facts reproachful to another, made by design, and with knowledge of its falseness." We deny any one to point out in the Columbian any accusation of crime or offense, false or otherwise; any false representation of the facts that were reproachful to the commissioners. They misreprehended us entirely when they accused us of attempting to calumniate them. We have no fight with the county commissioners, but when their actions are not such as merit the approval of the people the Columbian will never hesitate to criticize. We believe that they acted honestly, but at the same time hastily, and as soon as the true condition of things was presented to their view, they at once abandoned their position, and now state publicly that owing to opposition from various sources they will do nothing towards an addition to the Court House. So far as the reason given in their card for awarding the contract to Hawke & Co. is concerned, we believe that it should be taken for the truth, and that all suspicion of dishonest motives on their part should be cast aside.

"Pen-sy"

About Fires.
An Insurance Company gives the following practical suggestions on applying water on fires. "Firemen should be well to wear in mind that one gallon of water at the bottom of a fire will do more to quench it than ten gallons at the top. 'Play low' is the true motto for the fireman. To play on the roof of a house on fire is to waste water, be sure to play low; get the water near the fire and then you need not pour on a river. A few gallons at the bottom of a fire will rise in clouds of steam when the fire is rising, and quench it. A gill of water thrown into the bottom of a grate equals a quart thrown on top. For a similar reason water on the windward side is more effective than on the leeward. The big blaze on the leeward looks fearful, but it cannot be effected by playing on that side. Throw water in the bed of coals under the retort that is sucking them and it will go out, that is to say, play at the bottom of the windward side of a fire and you take the speediest way to quench the whole leeward side, the blaze included.
This advice would no doubt, be very valuable to our firemen if they had anything to fight fire with, but as the town at present has no water for fire protection all this talk about water to throw it to do the most good is of little value.

There was quite an excitement in town on Tuesday over the sinking of the first of the new railroad bridge. A large number of people were on the wharves and banks watching the operation. The stone used to sink the crib were procured at Blue Hill. The diver, clad in his gum suit and helmet of glittering copper, was the object of admiration of all the small boys, and they were on hand in force. The large stone for building the piers has not been contracted for as yet, although there is some talk of getting them from near Lewistown. After considerable work the crib was sunk to its proper position, it fitting on the bottom perfectly.—Saturday Democrat.

Mauch Chunk.
A HIDE OVER THE SWITCH-BACK.
Mauch Chunk is well named the "Switzerland of America." It is nestled down in a valley and on all sides high peaks lift their heads in the air, wanting nothing but snow caps on their crowns to make one believe he is really among the Alps. It is hard to see why a town should have been laid out in such a location, but when we remember that this was one of the first points where coal was discovered, and that there is no place near, that offered any better location we can better understand it. Every body who goes to Mauch Chunk takes a ride over the famous "Switch-Back" railroad. Starting from the hotel in a coach drawn by four horses you are carried up to East Mauch Chunk, a distance of only a half mile, and there wait for the train. Soon it appears in sight running at a rapid rate, and as it approaches the station it halts suddenly. The "train" consists of one car, with seats extending across the whole width, and a roof overhead, the sides and ends being open. The engineer is a young man who sits by the brake, and starts and stops the car. There is no engine, no motive power, not even a single fly wheel, no drum, no belt, and no gear, and certainly no gears. Leaving the station we move off, gradually increasing the speed, until we have reached a velocity of twenty-five miles an hour. Soon we turn a sharp curve and find ourselves looking up an inclined plane twenty-three hundred feet long, and as we were told fifteen hundred feet high. To this plane the car is drawn by a track which is provided with numerous arrangements to prevent accidents. At the top of the plane we are on Mount Pisgah. Here a magnificent view is afforded. On both sides we look down on the valleys beneath, where towns are scattered here and there, the river winds its way up and down the hills, and the railroads intersect each other in all directions. Starting from this point we begin the descent, and running for nine miles, we come to the foot of another plane and are again hoisted to the top of a mountain, and find ourselves in a little village called Summit Hill. Here we stop for twenty minutes, and are conducted by small boys, who offer themselves as guides, a short distance to the burning mine. Smoke issued from the surface of the ground, and we were told that the fire had been burning for forty years, and every effort to extinguish it has failed. Coal was first discovered at this point in 1797 but nothing much was done with it until about 1812, when they began to quarry it. In 1827 the railroad over which it came back to Mauch Chunk, was laid out, being one of the first in the country. A nine mile run, and a most delightful ride, brought us to the starting point, where the coach awaited us and we returned to the hotel. The Episcopal Church of Mauch Chunk is one of the handsomest in the State. The widow of Alex. Packard, just presented the chapel, with a grand building containing a chapel, Sunday school room, library &c. There is a fine new town hall, and several excellent hotels. The Mauch Chunk Democrat owned by Judge Henry E. Packard, and edited by J. W. Broadhead, an able journalist, is the leading paper of the county. One who was in session in this town on a Wednesday morning we dropped in for a few moments, Judge Decher was on the bench. He is one of the prominent Common Pleas Judges of the State.
Mauch Chunk is a summer resort that is visited by large numbers of city people, and we know of no more pleasant place to spend a few weeks than in this town among the mountains.

Church Festivals in Season.
For church fairs and festivals there are two principal seasons. The oyster season reaches its height at midwinter. The strawberry season begins about the present time, but was this year a little retarded by the late season of the opening spring. The oyster and the strawberry are the representative elements of aid to church enterprises needing cash and to the exhausted treasuries of benevolent societies. Both oyster and berry stimulate beneficent endeavor, promote cheerfulness and encourage sociability. Exactly what the good women of the churches would do without these helps is not ecclesiastical ecclesiology is not known. These and other valuable luxuries are utilized to their utmost capacity to raise money for devotional purposes at home and for missionary effort abroad. If a few hundred dollars are needed to put a new roof on the church or to send a missionary to the Ganges, the oyster and strawberry are announced. The oyster or the strawberry, according to season, crowns the festive board with its lusciousness. Even if the oyster boat solitary in a weak stew of water and milk, and the crushed strawberry peeps bluntly from between flattened layers of shortened cake, they are yet present and had in a manner pleasantly combining their virtues with enterprising sales and apothecaries' profit. On a small investment in bivalve and berry amazing pecuniary results are produced. The company is dismissed; the dishes are washed; the weary women cease from their toil and go home; the treasurer counts the cash and all are happy over the aggregation of wealth produced by this simple means.
But simple as it seems to give a strawberry or oyster festival, there is a great deal of labor in it for the good women who prepare the entertainment and wait upon the guests. If they were to charge for their services at the ordinary prices paid for days' work it is by no means certain that the festival and fair would always result in a money profit, however great the pleasure derived from carrying them on. It is easy to see these excitable sisters are thus the largest contributors to the cause which is refreshed. Not in money, for it is not always the case that they have money to give. But they give of their health and life, which are more than money. If it is suggested to them that the taking up of subscription to raise the needed money would be an easier and more practical way to accomplish the end in view, they would simply say that the suggestion knows nothing about it and that money cannot be given with any certainty raised in that way.

Yet, when we look at what people can do when they have a mind to do it, the taking of a subscription does not seem as hopelessly impracticable as it first appears. In Arlington, Mass., is a church which needed six thousand dollars. This is not a rich man's church. The congregation is composed chiefly of persons of moderate means. It was determined to try to raise the money without the aid of oyster, strawberry, picnic or festival. To each person in the church, whether man, woman or child, an envelope was given with the request to enclose in such donation as could be given with a willing heart. To the astonishment of all concerned the opening of the envelopes disclosed a total of more than a hundred dollars over and above what had been asked for. In this case the giving was all solid generosity. When festivals and picnics are given, and money passes across the counter for knick-knacks and eatables, there is more bargain than benevolence, more craft than charity.
Yet perhaps the festivals are needed. Beyond dispute it is pleasant to see a company of comely ladies dishing out refreshments, call it benevolence or anything else we please. There are some thoughtless, or possibly covetous persons who will enclose it in an envelope. For them the oyster festival and the strawberry fair have their mission.—Ez.

Price $1.00.
