POETICAL.

AS THE WIND BLOWS.

The wind blows north, the wind blows south.

The wind blows east and west.

No matter how the true wind blows.

Some ship will find it best.

Some one out on the wide, wide sea.

Shouts with a happy air.

"He's making head and way, the sailor.

The wind is blowing fair."

One ship sails out into the east.

Another to the west.

One has to struggle hard and hard.

By winds and waves oppressed—

Under bare masts, tossed to and fro.

By rain and salt spray wet—

The other lies before the gale.

With all her white sails set.

"O wind, O wind, why dost thou blow,

And out to ocean roar,

And fight me with thy little bark?

Toward some pleasure shore?

What hour will it be to thee

When I do break the waves?

My arms are out and I will find

A cold, forgotten grave?"

"O foolish one, why wilt thou steer

Against the mighty gale?

There are ten thousand ships afloat,

Boats they say.

"If thou wouldst find thy pleasure here,

Oppose me will no more.

My arms are out and I will find

A cold, forgotten grave."

"If it will with mine mate strive,

Do then the best thou can.

Against all my might let all thy skill,

And fight me like a man.

Stand by the wheel, steer steadily,

Keep watch above, below;

Such things will I do as they seek.

No matter what wind blows."

SELECT STORY.

FELIX DEAN'S ADVENTURE.

"I'm off," said Mr. Charles Bevan, Jr., putting on his overcoat. "It's one of our free and easy nights; and I wouldn't miss a meeting of the Jolly Swaggers, no, not for the gold medal in material media. If you're coming with me, Dean, put on your traps, and let's be off."

"No, Charles; not to-night. I must really get to work and do some reading.

Time flies, and unless I make a beginning

I shan't even have a fight for it."

"Get to work! Nonsense! Let's enjoy life a little. You've got the luck to be here in London, instead of our native

Slowerest, so you'd better make the worst of it. Come with me to the Savoy to-night, and get to work to-morrow refreshed and re-inspired."

"Yes, with a splitting headache. No,

I have spoken. I have said work, and work I mean. You Savages must get on without me this time. I've been looking at dates, and felt positively frightened. I find I've only got a little over a month to prepare for my examination. How I shall pull through I don't know; but it is clear that I must make a start and stick at it. Don't press me

—there's a good fellow, but leave me to myself."

Charles Bevan could see that his friend Felix Dean was in earnest. He sighed, put on his hat and prepared to go forth unattended by his companion.

"If you won't, you won't, though I don't see why on earth you shouldn't.

However, here's luck to you over your
