Stranger than Fiction.

THE REMARKABLE CAREER OF A VERMONT MURDERER.

Henry DeBosyns, one of the most eqtraordinary criminals of the age, is to be hanged to day, April 27, at Eliz abethtown, a little village on Lake Champlain. His crime is commonplace enough, being that of wife murder, but enough, being that of wife murder, but his career has been a most remarkable are as fearless as any race of aborigione. A year ago last summer he drifted from New York city up the Hudson, will are forty relief held the writer was at Quillute, the Indian the medical corps, to Kansas, at that and thence along the western shore of village forty miles below Cape Flat time a howling wilderness. One day and thence along the western shore of Lake Champlain until he reached the town of Essex, where he procured employment as a farm laborer. After a brief courtship he married Elizabeth Wells, a widow much his senior in years, who owned a small property. On the 1st of Angust, 1882, Mr. and Mrs. DeBosyns were seen driving out of the village, and after a brief interval DeBosyns was seen continuing the journey alone. Circumstances plainly pointed to the husband as the murderer. He was arrested and upon his person was found a quantity of articles of personal property, which were identified as belonging to his wife. The trial took place last March, and the evidence, though entirely circum stantial in its character, was overwhelming as to the respondent's guilt. The first degree, Returning he went to Rome, thence to Paris, thence to New York and thence to the Indian territory. The outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war called him from his aboriginal retirement, and he crossed the sea and entered the French army, rising by successive promotions until he became colonel under General Bourbaki. He served all through the war with varying fortunes, at its close escaping to Marseilles, whence he ship-ped for America. On this side the ocean his careeer was not so brilliant. He fell by degree until he became a tramp, wandering about the country and doing odd jobs of work as a painter and a farm laborer; and finally came the crime which put an end to his restless career.
