POETICAL. WHAT IS THE USE?

What is the use of this impetuous haste? The end is certain. Let us take our time, And hoard the vital forces that we waste.

What is the use of rushing with great breath? After old age, its turban, its white hair? Why need we hurry so to welcome Death?

There is no use, dear heart, if we wait out All things will find us. Let us pause, I say, We cannot go beyond the silent gate.

That has a short day's journey down the way, So let us take our time in youth's fair bowers, The summer season is so brief at best; Let us look on the stars and pick the flowers.

Let us not fear our feet grow weary, let us rest, Let us take time for love and its delight; It is the time for sweet things that pays for all.

The bitterness of life, and sorrow's bitter path, For pain's despair and death's fearful path.

In the lost era when the world was new, Love was man's first pursuit and life's excuse, Now has that time come back to me and you?— Why should we seek for more, what is the use?

Edna Wheeler.

SELECT STORY. PAPA'S BLESSING.

"I have asked Wynn to come out this evening to talk over a little business, Dora. If he should arrive before I get here you must see to him, until I come. Be kind and polite to him, my dear. He is really a very well-meaning and unassuming fellow, and the most useful bookkeeper I have ever had."

THE WORLD. "I have to tell you that there is excellent news from America; we have closed the contract with that firm in New York of which you have heard me speak, and the transaction will bring us in something very like twenty thousand pounds. Not at all a bad job—eh, Wynn?"

"You are usually fortunate, sir," answered Wynn, a little bitterly. "I have something else to say which will interest you more nearly, my boy. We have just heard of the death of John, our Secretary at Hong Kong, and I am called upon to send some one to fill his place. It's rather a good position and we need some one we can trust. I've been rather pleased with the way you've done your duties lately, and I've been thinking—hem—hem—short. I've made up my mind to give you the place."

"But sir," began Wynn, in desperation. "Oh, no, thanks! I know you appreciate it all that, and of course, and I'm sure we will be satisfied with you. Could you be ready to go next month?"

"I will think it over, sir. I suppose it is not necessary to give you my answer at once or two?"

"No, certainly not," replied the merchant, a little surprised at Wynn's way of receiving such a piece of good fortune.

"Then followed an announcement which, for an instant, caused the bookkeeper to start and to look at the merchant with a hot and cold lightning rapidity.

"Perhaps you will be interested in a piece of family news which has given me the greatest satisfaction, Wynn. My daughter is to be married."

"Impossible! I mean, sir, I heard nothing of it," stammered poor Wynn.

"Oh!" exclaimed the merchant, staring at his companion in astonishment. "No, I suppose not. The fact of the matter is, Miss Blair doesn't know of it herself yet; but she will, of course, be as pleased as I am. The letter only came to-day from an old friend of mine, who has made millions—millions, my boy—in sugar, and writes proposing marriage between his only son and my daughter. The young man has seen my Dora somewhere, it seems, and was quite smitten with the little puss. He is coming to us on a visit next week. Now, Wynn, I can see for you, that you are a good fellow, and I have no objection to your marrying her, if you like."

"Thank you, sir, I was going to ask something of the kind. We expect to be at the Grosvenor Hotel."

"Should you like a week's holiday?"

"Not at present, thank you," answered Wynn, feeling guilty that he was extremely likely to be given a much more prolonged holiday than he desired.

"Very well, my boy. I wish you all manner of luck. Return in the month of business, and I will give you the letter I promised to my friend the clergyman."

About nine o'clock p. m. on the
