Corn Fodder.

Vaugan's Manual.

When the farmer has stored up the ears of corn in his bins he has laid only two-thirds of the feeding value of his crop. The stalks that bore his corn hold another third. Yes, the stalk, or death are the results. corn fodder, as it is called, is worth nearly or quite one-half of the grain for feeding stock. Governor Boutwell estimates the value of his fodder at onehalf the value of his hay; that is, if the hay is sold at $20, fodder was worth had his attention called to a boy about $10, and for every ton of fodder used twelve years of age, who had picked up he sold one ton of hay. Dr. Sturtevant estimates his fodder at a sixtenths the value of his hay ; that is, ley. 'Boy, that melon isn't ripe,' warned when he sold his hay at $22 his corn fodder brought $13.20 a ton. Yet so the doctor. many farmers ignorant of its true value regard it only as a necessary ovil, and ply, waste it or even burn it. It should be cared for when husking time comes with as much certainty as the grain. The few who have large barns and only moderate fields of corn can stow it away loosely in their barns, but this method is not generally feasible. To handle it easily bind it near the middle into a small compact bundle, tying with rye straw or tarred twine. After a dozen or so are tied set them up carefully in shocks. As soon as possible after husking carry them under sheds or into barns, and have them ricked or stacked convenient to the barns or cattle yards. The great essential part is to keep them from being washed and bleached by the rains. By exposure the carbo-hydrates, the nutritious parts, are changed to fibre. Dr. Lewes is authority for the statement that dried fodder loses nothing but the water in the drying. Therefore its value i equal to that of green fodder, and it can be restored to its original condition by soaking in water.

They Found It.

Abraham and Joshua had been in vited to a splendid dinner.

It was impossible for Joshua not to make capital out of such an opportanity ; accordingly he managed to slip a silver spoon into his boot.

Abraham was green with envy at Joshua's success, for he had not even manipulated a saltspoon. But an idea struck him.

'My frents,' he cried, I will show you some drieks.

Taking up a spoon, he said : 'You zee deese spoons ? Vell, it, ees gone ! he cried, passing it up his sleeve. 'You vill find it in Joshua's boodt.

It was found.
