The issue of Tuesday's election wa clearly defined. It was either an approval or disapproval of the action of the Town Council in the sewer matter. If the majority of the Council postpoued action since the injunction until they could get an expression of public sentiment, they know now just what that sentiment is, and should act accordingly. A sewer that is course and a free passage can be obtained.

Hetlerville.

A word from Hetlerville, if you please. Some correspondent from these parts has effected discredit upon parties here, by tating in your last issue that they were inxlous to attend the singing class of Prof. Dichl "without joining the class or subcribing," and that "they will most likely slip up on it." This all sounds very wel where it is not contradicted. Parties here have withdrawn from the school because sey were dissatisfied with the proceedings; hey had a right to withdraw, and did so and no one has a right to say aught against t, much less make such a false report, They have withdrawn and don't desire to attend. This ought to end it without the ecessity of a printed lie in regard to their enduct in the matter. In justice to the parties alluded to, we hope you will flad space for this in your columns. A Bigamist in Jail.

Some weeks ago a warrant was issued by Esquire Morris for the arrest of Robert Whitmire on the charge of bigamy. It eems Whitmire once resided near Pine Summit, across the line in Lycoming couny, with his wife, formerly Miss Nellie buyder, by whom he had one child. After iving with her about a year be descrited er and came to Forks, this county, where e assumed the name of Kinsman and passed himself as a single man. He sub-B. Ryan of Williamsport, passed through equently made the acquaintance of Miss Wilson of this town, and they were married by Rev. J. Donohue, then paster of the M. E. Church. Miss Wilson deserted Whitmire on learning that he had a wife elsewhere, and instituted proceedings against him. In the meantime he had dis appeared and no trace could be found of him until last week when he was arrested in Luzerne county, and Constable Woodward went after him and brought him ere where he was lodged in jail.

Saturday last Mr. Samuel Hagenbuch, o Centre, while watching his men thresh with a lever-power machine, was caught in the joint of the driving rod and thrown to the floor and twisted about the rod six or eight times before the machine could be topped, each time being forced through a page of a very few inches between the rod and barn floor. When released he was unonscious, and did not fully recover conclousness at any time, living till the next Monday morning, 3 o'clock, when death came to his relief. Dr. Megargel was called, and finding his arm broken and his head and body badly bruised and mutitaed, did all that seemed possible to render elief from pain, but could do no morehis injuries were fatal. He was seventyeight years old last January, and wa never obliged to keep his bed a single day from sickness. He leaves a widow, ter children and a large circle of friends to nourn his loss. Herbert Spencer deplores the low standard of youth-training in the home; hence, says "that a very high degree of perfection topics of interest were then discussed by cannot be hoped for in the school, for the fathers and mothers are not good enough." While the teachers recognize the true or false home through the child, they never-

It is well to adjourned to meet again on Saturday, Feb. realize how responsible a position the primary school teachers have to maintain. Their object is to develop in the pupils a fer that the public is in favor of such meetfree, but well-governed intellectual spirit, a noble character, and a high morality. Teachers in the primary grades often do much to hamper the freedom of children unnecessarily. They are to apt to forget the kinds of life the children have lived betore the restraints of the school-room were placed upon them. Nature has beautifully endowed the mother with the love and tenderness that the little child instinctively clings to and depends upon. 'The mother is the child's ideal of tenderness, trust, joy. Now as the child leaves its natural kindergarten to enter upon the routine of daily school-life, at the tender age of six years, a teacher is needed who will act the part of mother-a work that requires tact and skill not to be excelled in the whole range of human endeavor. The ltttle child without a motherteacher suffers the greatest injury that can possibly befall it. Primary teachers, study the natures entrusted to your care, so that you may not thwart the plan of Nature which she in her wisdom would work out for her child. True educators will in stinctively seek for the principles on which all methods are based, and adopt those which are most in barmony with the laws of mental growth. Unless there is a definite psychological aim, the children are at the mercy of well-intended but often misdirected efforts. What a great work is ours! Every faculty that God has given is in the open field for tillage. Feelings and affections are different in different minds; faculties of intelligence which spring into glad activity in one mind lie dormant in another. Imagination may be as vivid as fire in one, and remain a closed book in another. Infinite variety adds interest and difficulty to the work. Sowing that others may gather, planting that others may reap must be the accepted work of all teaching. A true teacher's life is one of sacrifice and criticism. "Nothing is popular which calls men to judgment." But unselfish,

TO YOUNG TRACHERS.

Many a young teacher has asked with anxiety, "When may I know that I have done enough?" And certainly the question is quite puzzling to the honest mind before you a mixed company of scholars. among whom there are not only no two alike, but also you have to teach the grammar student as well as the Abecedarian. "Who is sufficient for these things ?" Each teacher is expected to have such a sufficiency in himself. You can't depend on all you read about methods. Whether the methods are at fault or not, prove all you try : hold fast to those that are good. Let the standard of book learning be the quantity and quality both of the pupils' present knowledge, and of that which is to be attained. Teach morality by example as well as by precept. If you don't, your talking will not count for much. Honor the least spark of goodness you may see in the most degraded child-you do not know "what possibilities may be buttoned" in the child's coat. The way some young teachers enter a school-room would be laughable to the scholars if they were not afraid of the ever-to-be-dreaded birch Clothed with the most high and mighty au hority of a country school teacher, you oon find that the "advice" you have re ceived about "rules" is not at all applicable to the case in hand. Don't depend or it too much, use your own judgment. A mistake is often made in trying to conceal from the scholars ignorance of the subject in which you are expected to be "sufficient." If you don't know a thing you better be frank than to deceive. A week or so ago a little son of Julius Hoft was attacked and severely bitten by a arge dog owned by Loeb, causing much pain to the child and anxlety to the parents for many days. This is the third case of attacks being made by this dog which has ome under our own personal observation, nd many persons are afraid fo meet the log on the public streets. Is there no law protect citizens in this matter? Notwithstanding that the editors of both Berwick papers were aware of the facts in the case, no comment was made by either. Now can it be that such items are too insignificant to mention, and that a dog known to be dangerous is to be permitted o run around loose without the public beng informed of its brutal nature? The siace of the papers may be understood when it is known that the owner of the dog is an extensive advertiser. A citizen's meeting was held last week
