About 700 applications from all parts of the county were considered, of which nearly 200 were from ple truth. Wilkesbarre. Against 140 of these the law and order league filed remonstrances, and fought each case bitterly. They alleged that all these 140 were unnecessary, and in forty cases charged specified violations of the liquor law, and sought to establish this charge by testimony. Out of the five hundred applications from the county, outside of Wilkesbarre, 132 were refused; and in Wilkesbarre forty-six applications were withdrawn. The citizens' committee have expressed a determination to see that in all places not licensed the sale of liquor is stopped on the day the license expires.

Editor Bray of the Waverly Free Press ander the above head relates in the following interesting manner some of the trials and tribulations of an editor :

Of all men living, the editor seems to be the one most loved, most hated, most cursed, most praised, most envied, and most traduced. If he gives an unbiased helves. The prices are very low, and as opinion on any subject, it is no sooner in print than part of the people are criticising and condemning, and a part are upholding him in his views. If he neglects to give all the news, whether it be that which would carry gladness to the hearts of many. or darkness into the lives of some, he is accused of being afraid to give facts, and let the people judge for themselves of the merits of the case. If perchance, some question is raised in the village where he resides, that he must needs have something to say, pro or con, he at once begins an exhaustive search to ascertain the bottom facts; and after satisfying himself as to the true standing of matters, he then attempts to give the facts as he has learned hem, and ten chances to one if he is not asked to rectify an imaginary wrong, and if he calls for facts is given a diatribe, expecting of course, that the editor is to publish it and shoulder the responsibility. But few,-we may safely say not one in fifty,know how difficult it is to publish a paper and avoid making bitter enemies. Scarcely a day or week passes but the attention of an editor is called to acts of people, which were they brought before the public would keep the kettle of scandal turbe

Communications on politics are often robbed of their force by the refusal of the writer to have his name printed. If a man has anything to say on any subject that is worth printing, he ought not to be afraid to have people know who wrote it. It has grown into a custom to sign some non d plume to such articles, leaving the editor to assume all the responsibility. While we are willing to publish all proper communications, we are not willing to shoulder the years died on Sunday last after suffering blame for everything that anybody may want to say.

Nellie Cooley's Body Found. We gather the following from the Wilke

Barre Record of Wednesday The mystery which has enshrouded the isappearance of Miss Nellie Cooley from ier home in Wilkes Barre on December 9th last, has at length been cleared away Her body was found yesterday morning it the Susquehanna about three miles below Nanticoke, and it is therefore certain that the unfortunate girl left the house of her guardian to find the oblivion she sought in the river. the river.

There seems to be some doubt as to who There seems to be some doubt as to who was the first to see the body. In the afternoon a telegram was received at the Record office that James M. Fink, a track laborer on the N. & W. B. R. R. was the first to discover the body, but excellent authority says that the remains were discovered by Albert Bloom, a brakeman on the Pennsylvania road. He first saw the remain about 8:10 a. m., when on the trip down

The message sent to him, howver, contained merely the appouncement that the body of a woman in a badly decomposed condition had been found in the river, and it was supposed that it was the remains of Miss Cooley. The under garments were well preserved and on one of them close examination revealed the initials "N. D. C." This removed the last doubt as to the identity of the remains, and the friends at Wilkes Barre were promptly notified by telephone, and their uncertainty finally dispelled. A coffin was procured from the Poor House, the remains placed therein and removed to that building where hey remained until evening, when the box was placed on the cars and taken home.
Dr. C. S. Beck identified the remains from the fillings in the teeth.

The circumstances attending Miss Cooley's disappearance will be remembered by most of our readers. She was last seen alive on the evening of Sunday, December 10th. She retired as usual on that even-ing and on the following morning it was discovered that she had left the house dudiscovered that she had left the house during the night, leaving a note in which she stated that not wishing to be longer a trouble to her friends she had gone to seek rest in oblivion. At first it was throught that she had taken some jewelry and money with her and this gave rise to a supposition on the part of some that she had only sought a home elsewhere. From the first however, the helief that she had gists. her body in the river, and for traces of her on land will be well remembered by on land will be well remembered by Wilkes Barreans, as also the many false reports circulated of her being seen in various localities, which were in turn in-

ANDREW DESMOND'S PRAISES. Dear Sir—I lay on my side for four long months without any relief until I commen-ced taking Phelps' Rheumatic Elixir. It is the best medicine I ever used. To-day is the best day I have seen in twelve months. I thank you and God Almighty and no one else for my relief. I have lived and done public business in Geneva, N. Y., for the public business in Geneva, N. 1., for the last twenty, therefore have many acquain-tances that call around and see me daily and to ask about Phelps' Elixir for them-selves or for some of their friends. I praise it highly. You do the talking and sign my name as my tongue could not do it justice
