SELECT STORY. A FAVOR OF FORTUNE.

Jason Hall, a quiet, old, castellated structure of the time of Queen Elizabeth, situated upon the coast of Essex and overlooking the English Channel.

In 1832, the time of which we write, Sir Thomas, grown old and battered in the service of his country, returned upon full pay.

The individual attacked was certainly more than three score—perhaps nearer to three-score and ten—habited in a sort of undress, free-and-easy naval uniform.

At all events he would not see a face which he had not seen before, and he had almost reached the Lieutenant's feet.

Fortune favors the brave," said George, laughing. "Faint heart never won fair lady. I shall be glad to see you in the morning."

What a shock was that for the British Admiral! At first he could not credit the evidence of his senses. It could not be possible that he had heard aright.

The young and gentlemanly Lieutenant was thunderstruck—utterly astounded.

Having thus spoken he bowed again very low and then turned to a servant, passing out under a torrent of abuse.

On the broad piazza George met the Lady Emeline. When she saw his face she caught him eagerly by the arm and asked what had happened.

Her lover's strength and spirit, his confidence in right and justice, and his masterful manner of speech and action, soon brought the sorrowful incident to a more hopeful state.

When our hero first discovered him he had dodged behind a large oak tree, while the stag stood ready for a charge upon the spot in the park.

At all events he would not see a face which he had not seen before, and he had almost reached the Lieutenant's feet.

Fortune favors the brave," said George, laughing. "Faint heart never won fair lady. I shall be glad to see you in the morning."

Hand-in-hand, following close behind, the "Groucher," as it was commonly called—they found Sir Thomas there alone, with a pipe in his mouth, and a decanter and glass at his elbow.

He saw the intruder, and was upon his feet in an instant, his pipe dropped and broken, and his red face the picture of astonishment.

A Woman Bandit.

La Carambola, the woman brigand, led a terror to travelers in this region, as dead as a bolt with a bullet in her heart.

One of her schemes, it has been learned, was to hide her money in some town until she found one or two men of means who were going by the diligence to some distant point.

When the woman found that she was suspected she abandoned this plan of operation and, remaining with the robber band to which she was attached, devoted the greater part of her time to the abduction of wealthy aristocrats.
