It is one of the questions which the farmer is often called upon to consider, to what extent it will be to his advantage. work, or by costly repairs and alterations. The temptations in most cases to keep on in the old way with the old implements is strong. New machines, whatever their merits may be, have always had to meet a great deal of prejudice and opposition at first. It is true of farmers as well as of many other people, that there exists a natural aversion to radical change. It is so er people, that there exists a natural aversion to radical change. It is so much easier to keep along in the old ruts. And so we find many now who cling to the old scythe instead of using a mower that would do the work easier and much better; and they still swing the heavy cradle through the grain, when a first-class reaper would cut and bind the whole field in one twentieth of the time. Others labor long and wearily with hand-hoes through the rows of corn and potatoes, when their cultivation could be done much more thoroughly and effectively with the aid of horse power.

We know of farmers, who have emi-thoroughly and effectively with the aid of horse power.

We know of farmers, who have emigrated to this country from Europe, who still use the sickle in harvesting instead of the cradle, claiming that the former makes a great saving in grain.

It certainly must take a vast amount of prejudice to keep one to the old, tedious, back-breaking process with a sickle, when an improved reaper and binder is clicking in an adjoining field and going through a large harvest in a few days of good weather. It is the height of false economy to refuse the use of machines because of their first cost, or because they may not pick up all the remnants as could be done by hand. When the saving in time, for season after season, is considered, and the much better opportunites that are afforded for getting a crop in at the right time, and the larger areas that may be kept under cultivation by this method, there is little reason left for using the old-fashioned hand implements. Of course the extent to which machines may be used will depend to some degreee upon the grade of the land and the natural character of its soil. Many machines are extensively used in the Western States that would soil. Many machines are extensively used in the Western States that would not be available in a hilly, stony region, with a soil full of stumps and roots. Yet o'ten difficulties like these are not so great as so as suppose, and machines might be used in many places where they are not now considered available.

Working Horses Without Shoes.

A good deal of money is worse than wasted in the needless shoeing of farm-horses; for the shoe being unnatural is always accompanied with more or less risk, especially in the hands of ig-norant or careless farriers. Bad shoeing and trotting on hard pavements are all unusual to see valuable horses in all large cities sacraficed after a short period of abuse for a small fraction of the surface of the earth cooliod of abuse, for a small fraction of their worth when sound. Such horses are often young, spirited, and valuable animals, and need only a little careful handling to recover the use of their feet in many instances. The best treattor a few weeks, when they will often shoes. Shoeing is far less needed than most persons suppose; if the horse is worked on the farm, and does not have to travel much on very stony or very hard roads, he will do better without shoes for at least eight months of the year; if the roads are quite hard, many most persons and shade which the coolness to be cause of the coolness and shade which the coolness to be cause of the coolness and shade which the coolness to be cause of the coolness and shade which the coolness to be cause of the coolness and shade which the coolness to be cause of the coolness and shade which the coolness to be cause of the coolness and shade the coolness to be cause of the coolness and shade the coolness to be coolness to be cause of the coolness and shade to the shell, as much as sixty pounds. Two of these gigantic pounds are poun damized, or stony, as they are in the neighborhood of the writer, horses with good sound hoofs will do a great deal of work without shoes, and suffer no injury. One of the ablest physicians of Middlesex county, who has a large practice, and is obliged to drive his horses sometimes pretty hard, find they do better without shoes, although he lives in a district where the roads are do better without shoes, although he lives in a district where the roads are very hard. Of course the hoofs must be sound, and if accustomed to shoes must be accustomed to going without them by degrees, but when used with some care there is no difficulty in driving most horses as much as they ought to be driven over roads of average hardness without shoeing at all, for at least eight months of the year; if the work is on pavements, the case is different, especially if drawing heavy loads upon the pavements, when the shoe with calks is needed to enable the horse to hold on and to prevent slipping. In Winter when the roads are icy, the sharpened shoes must be used to prevent slipping, but on ordinary snow, until it becomes ics, there is no occasion for shoes in Winter any more than in Summer. The saving is not occasion for shoes in Winter any more than in Summer. The saving is not only in blacksmiths' bills, but in the greater health and soundness of the horse's fact. These horse's feet. There are many chances to pick up valuable horses in our cities made lame by bad shoeing, which only need to have their shoes taken off and rest for a few months to make valuable the animals.-New York Observer.

Preserving Out Flowers-

Different flowers require a different mode of keeping ; for instance, the rose from the carnation. I have found by experience that all flowers, after they are cut, in order to retain freshness, should be kept in a cool place, and away from air as much as possible. I have seen handsome cut flowers arranged in a vase or basket set in the front window, with the window raised upon them, which would soon cause them to drop and hang their heads. By all means do not raise the window on cut flowers; the air will cause them to whither much sooner than the heat. Should you have a bouquet or basket, see that the flowers are kept well sprinkled with cold water through the day, and at night before you have your basket or bouquet put in some air-tight vessel and placed in the coolest part of the house; be careful and do not put it where it will freeze. Keep it in cover the flowers with well-moistened paper or a very thin cloth, and you will find that the flowers, which were wilted and hanging their heads the night before, will have freshened up and look nearly, if not quite, as well as they did when received from the florist.

Peach Trees in Sod-

A Maryland correspondent says he has a peach tree on a lawn which is kept closely mown, which is perfectly healthy and bears large crops of fruit annually, while all his orchard trees have long since succumbed to disease. He inquires whether it would be wise to treat a whole peach orchard like this? In our country where much of the the core, and after stewing it, mix it trouble of fruit growers comes from with some cold boiled rice, the yolks the earth getting too warm in summer, a closely mown lawn is the perfection of good culture. Grass, when continamong the most frequent causes of ually mown, has not very strong roots, rice, etc.; beat the whites of the two lameness in all cities; and it is not at and does not therefore rob the peach
