Crossing the Atlantic in the Air.

Asked his opinion as to the worth of certain unfulfilled promises on the part of American aeronauts, Mr. Coxwell is not strange that funerals are continremarked: "I never pay much regard ually occurring, and that the strangest do this is to avoid doing the work are generally so outrageous as to be indulged in on these occasions. Nothing stronger can be said to prove the necessity for ventilation in bedrooms, and of thoroughly airing the sheets, coverlets and mattresses in the morning before putting them into the form of a neatly-made bed. Chil-dren more than any others suffer from bad air. The restless tossing and muttering, the disturbed sleep, all give strongest evidences of the effects of bad air. This is further confirmed by the dull eye, stupid expression, languid movements, and unrefreshed feeling which are visible in the morning. Every house should be well ventilated the body sufficiently covered with warm, loose, suitable clothing, and be sure the sleep will be sound and refreshing and will be manifested in the bright eye and vigorous growth and

How Tides Rise and Fall. Let us consider the moon first, as its action, from its greater proximity to the earth, is much more effective in producing tidal waves than that of the We know from the laws of gravity that the moon tends to draw the earth towards itself. If the moon be overhead, its tendency is to draw the earth upwards: if it be at the antipodes, beneath the feet, its tendency is to draw the earth downwards. Now, if the earth were a rigid, solid mass, like a ball of iron, this action of the moon would have no other appreciable effect than to draw the earth as a whole upwards or downwards. The case, however, is different when on the surface of the solid globe there is an ocean of liquid matter. The force with which gravity acts is greater the nearer two bodies are to one another : onsequently when the moon is overhead the surface of the sea is attracted with greater force than the solid yields to this force, and is raised up in the shape of a wave, much in the same manner as we may have seen the hair of the head rise up toward a charged electric machine. The converse of this action holds good also at the antipodes at the same time. There the bottom of the sea is attracted more than the surface of the waters; conse quently, the latter drop away, as it were, from the earth, and also assume a wave-like form. Thus we have at opposite sides of the earth similar waves raised at the same time by the moon's attractive force. Then the earth revolves on its axis, brings every place in turn under each of these waves, when it is high water in each place as it arrives at the wave, and low water when between the two
