SELECT STORY.

SETTLING DOWN. Ahem! Well, my dear, we'll settle down for good.

"I see plainly that you need taming. I have got my little mustang tamed, and now I must tame her. But let's make a bargain, Lelia, dear. What will you take not to do anything unbecoming to a married lady for a month?"

"Just the same amount you would take to smother a cross word to me during the length of time mentioned, or scold about anything."

"Now, Mrs. Weldon, I prefer to be the judge of my own conduct, without any restraint from petticoat law, and really, pet, you wouldn't have other words for me than I was a heepeked husband, would you?"

"And Mr. Weldon pinched Lelia's cheek playfully. 'And Lelia, my love, you wouldn't have other people think that I was a down-trodden wife?'"

"Then interposing people would talk when they saw the change creep over Lelia's face."

"Ah, she has found him out," one old maid remarked. "He's taming her, that's plain, said a married friend."

"It is all nonsense, love is," said another acquaintance. "Before he was married he was in this respect. When he took her everywhere, and she was so devoted; and now I don't suppose he takes her out once a month."

"Mr. Weldon did not mean to treat his wife unkindly, but if he had only taken a peep at her end of the telescope."

"Only married a year, and yet seemed a lifetime to Lelia."

"A wave of gladness swept over her face, then it died away, and a hard, bitter light crept into those glorious eyes."

"She started as if to meet her husband, then sat down as she wearily thought that it was of no use; he would only trounce at her childishness."

"But someone a different spirit seemed to possess her. 'Well, my dear, I am glad to see you so strong and hearty. You are a good deal better than you were a year ago, and I am glad to see you so strong and hearty.'"

"And Lelia Weldon kissed the half-pouting lips. 'But, really, my dear, I want you to abide by my wishes.'"

"With pleasure, Louis." "Now I consider my judgment superior to yours in some things."

"And if you can only convince me of the last-mentioned fact, I suppose things generally will assume that even tenor that is so admirable."

"Well, then, what would you prefer—'Hold the Fort' or 'Old Hundred'?" "But Mr. Weldon was reading a very interesting item, and failed to answer."

ing to the flower of this family; in fact, you are the entire plant—vinegar plant, to speak accurately!"

"Do you not feel sorry for poor Arthur?" "A hard, bitter light came into the sorrowing mother's eyes as she answered him."

"Do you think I could feel pruder? Do you think I could feel pruder for the man to whom I gave my first-born to love and cherish, gave my first-born, believing that he would make her happy?"

The Duke in Court. It is to be regretted that the opportunity which was presented to a Montreal judge to deliver a judgment on the meaning of the Duke was not properly improved.

A Mr. Hamilton, of Montreal, having used a fellow-member of the Canadian civil service for calling him a dudu on the public street, the court had to ascertain what a dudu is in order to decide whether it is an insult.

The court found that a dudu is an insult, and that the fellow-member of the Canadian civil service was guilty of an insult.

The court then proceeded to deliver its judgment, and found that the fellow-member of the Canadian civil service was guilty of an insult.
