The begislature will convere next

Several republican papers of this state appear to have bassed a resolution to keep on the losing side. They supported Blaine, and got left. Now they are opposing Cameron's reselection to the senate, and will no doubt get left again. Cameron's defeat is a con summation devontly to be wished, but it is hardly among the possibilities.

Next August a candidate for sheriff of this county will be nominated by the Democrats. There are already several candidates in the field, and we are glad to announce that an agreement been made between some of them that they will not canvass the county for votes, but will make their announcements through the newspapers. There will be other applicants, no doubt, and there may be some who will not enter into this arrangement. Whoever they may be, the Democratic party should see that the candidate is chosen from see that the candidate is chosen from among those who stay at home. It is with musch pleasure thigh time the electioneering system so long practiced here, should be abandoned. No man can afford to take the office of sheriff, if he is to be compelled to spend two or three months in travelling over the county, even though he use no money except for necessary expenses. The fees of the office will not warrant such an outlay of time and cash. And no man ought to have it who will spend money in debauching voters who can be influenced by a liberal supply of liquor. No one's interests will suffer if all candidates will supply of liquor. No one's interests will suffer if all candidates will not be compelled to carry several hundred dead-heads in order to keep up our circulation, we are embled to continue the subscription at the same low price. If we want to the probability of an extra session of the body three of the county the per centage of locations and the continue the subscription is composed of the solid men of the county the per centage of locations and the county of the county of the county of the probability of an extra session of the location of the county of the county of the probability of an extra session of the forth in the county of the county of the probability of an extra session of the forth in the probability of an extra session of the forth in the county of the probability of the probability of an extra session of the forth in the probability of the probability of the probability of the probability o periment is worth trying at all events, and will meet with the hearty approval of the better class of citizens throughout the county.

Mr. Randall's Southern Tour.

WHAT SPEAKER CARLISLE SAYS OF IT.

A reporter of the Cincinnati Enquirer called upon Speaker Carlisle a tew days ago, and asked him what he thought of Mr. Randall's visit to the South:

South:

Octation policies editors, er does its duty, every dona and seven in thought of Mr. Randall's visit to the South:

South:

me that a great deal more importance has been attached to it by the press than is justified by anything that appears on the surface. There is certainly nothing remarkable in the fact that a public man like Mr. Randall should visit the South or any other part of the country, either with or without invita-tion. If any explanation is necessary or proper in such a case, I suppose Mr. Randall's own explanation ought to be sufficient. He is reported to have said that he is going South to make a social visit, upon the invitation of his friends; but even if he goes for purely political purposes it is no more than he has a perfect right to do. Certainly the advocates of tariff reform will welcome any opportunity that he or anybody any opportunity that he or anybody else may give them to discuss the question before the people in any part of the country. We have nothing to lose, but much to gain by open and intelligent discussion, and, in my opinion, we lost, or rather failed to secure, and secure and s many votes in the late campaign by our failure to meet Mr. Blaine and his supporters squarely upon this issue in every part of the country. Mr. Blaine, early in the contest, made protection to early in the contest, made protection to capt. Charles B. Brockway who merginated among a content of the country of the country of the contest, which is sensether. were strong and aggressive, were published and read all over the country : but it does not appear that he gained any votes by them, even in the manufacturing States of New York, Counecticut, New Jersey, and Ohio.

"Have you any information about the Cabinet!" Every man who reads the news-papers knows as much about the Cabinet as I do, and I think no one has any actual knowledge on the subject as yet. All we see and hear is mere speculation. Mr. Cleveland is very properly keeping his own counsel, and I think that when the time comes he I think that when the time comes he will act according to his own judgment in this as in all other matters. he wants information or advice he will, no doubt, ask for it; but unless those who know him best are greatly mistaken in their estimate of his character he will not be governed or influenced to any extent by the gratuitous is a conservative and sensible man, and will be careful in the selection of his constitutional advisers and secure able men to assist him in the Alministration. We have an abundance of good material to select from and he can hardly make a mistake."

"You then think he will give the country a good Administration ?" "I am very confident he will. It will be a business Administration all through. There will probably be no cessity or even opportunity for the display of any brilliant qualities in the management of either our foreign or domestic affairs, but there will be a accessity for hard work in the correction of great abuses and the institution of reforms at home and abroad. Our consular and diplomatic service needs some attention, while our methods of administration in the various executive departments, as well as our commer cial and revenue systems, require a thorough and systematic reformation. Of course everything cannot be done at once, but the work will have to be begun at the earliest possible moment I believe the new administration will deal fearlessly, but justly and fairly, with all those subjects, and that the whole country will be greatly benefit-

Walanamaker's.

PHILADELPHIA, December 29, 1884. It's over. The year of trade is over. The merry whirl at Christmas ends the long-drawn work and worry of tedious '84.

The year has been peculiar. There's instruction to be got from its flight. Let's look for it.

To begin with, there was no sign of extraordinary depression a year ago; but the pace of general trade was visibly slow. Anticipating some decline in prices we sold enormously in January at whatever things would bring, some without profit, some at a rate little short of the comical.

Having sold we bought as freely, and gained a season. We sold what belonged to the hurrying winter, and bought what belonged to the coming spring. The hardness of selling made buying easy; and again we sold in a way to keep trade moving. Summer found us with trade enlarged though profits di-

Again we had our choice, to go on or slacken pace. The times were still more critical. Merchants were failing; goods were falling buyers of all sorts tak ing alarm, economizing, buying less, though at advantageous prices. Again we overran Europe. But the sword of Damocles was hanging over us, We bought with caution and made your money go as far as we could.

Your money we say ad visedly. Your money at last has paid the bills.

We need not go over the tale of the last half year In the midst of your Christmas revel you scarcely care to stop to weigh our share in bringing about the present abundance. But what we have done is so apart from the usual course of business that we are disposed to think it over; and because our future concerns you about as much as ourselves, and because we look to you for it, we are doing a part of our thinking aloud. The year that is past has been a year of hardship in general; but for us, on the whole, a year of success. September was the first month in which our sales ever fell short of the sales of the previous year. October and November were losing months. December is evidently going to turn out a gain. And, so little the autumn losses were, the year on the whole is a gain.

Every one of you almost says to himself "I have spent less money this year; how can Wanamaker have poss bly sold more goods than ever before?" The question is worth our answer; and our answer shall be worth your hearing.

More people have come. The fall in goods and the fall in buying are more then made good by the number of buyers. The number of buyers, of course, depends on what we give for a dollar. We have given more than ever; and so more buyers have come. Busides, the natural result of our liberal policy is to increase the area of trade. Why shouldn't our trade increase, even though money go up and goods go down?

What next? Just now a little rest. We need it. Our faithful people need it. The time invites to rest. But shortly a new year begins. We've got to consider how to begin it. That is what we are thinking about.

Are the times any easier? Is money easier to get? Are there people still within trading distance to win? Is there a better way to win than by money, when money is dear?

We do not know how prices are going to rule, nor how the times are going to be. We think bottom is reached in everything, except now and then a minor tumble. Probably times will slowly mend. No general change for the better will suddenly come; for caution always lasts beyond the special occasion for it.

Let us count, then, on money hard to get, and prices too low for profit; on your present wants; on winter finally come to enforce a present supply; on spring and summer to follow with wants of their own. We may count on merchants in city and country hanging on to their profits and goods. We may count on your finding out for yourselves from day to day where your advantage lies.

So all we have to do is to make your advantage steadily here, steadily here. week in and week out, make your advantage steadily here: and we shall add to the trade we have won.

Our tactics then, till tradis brighter, are to keep on just as we are.

We are gathering trade for the future. We are keeping old good will and gaining new. We are changing our stock with every passing season. We are ready with fatest goods for the better time a-coming. as ready as if we were making money; our facilities are: all in use and therefore ready for use; and best of all our habit of large success has all the tenacity and force that continuous, long indulgence

We are going to keep on getting together the best in the world, selling for less than market rates whatever we can, and telling the news as the things are ready and the time is ripe.

JOHN WANAMAKER. Chestnut, Thirteenth and Market streets, and City-hall square.
