A Maniac With a Knife.

David Williams, an industrious miner, of Wilkes Barre, joined the Salva-tion Army about a month ago. He attended the meetings regularly and became so infatuated that he had to quit work. His mind is affected. Tuesday morn-ing he attempted to kill his little grand-child, Mamie Jones. He said the Lord told him in the night that if he wanted to save sinners he would have to make a sacrifice. An innocent babe would but answer the purpose. He accordingly went to the house of his daugh ter and requested to see little Mamie. When the child was brought to him he requested her to take a walk with him. The child, only four years old, accompanied her grandfather to his home. The crazy Salvationist then took her up in the garret and tied her to a table. He returned to the kitchen to get a butcher-knife with which to quarter his grandchild, when her screams attracted the attention of her grandmother, whe rushed up stairs and saved the little girl from a horrible death. Williams' plans became fros-trated, he became violent, and rushing out in the street with a big butcher knife in his hands, he made a plunge at every one he met. Men, women and children ran before him as though he were a mad dog. Reaching his daugh-ter's house he made a break for her with his knife and succeeded in inflict ing a severe gash in her arm. The injured woman made her escape into a room and locked the door. The man-iac then stabbed a neighbor's boy, who was sitting on the front stoop. The neighborhood was now greatly excited and four stalwart policemen, arriving on the scene, succeeded in capturing the lunatic after much difficulty. He
