A good jooke is told on a Sheriff of a neighboring county, who went in the country to "level" on a mule, but being told that the mule's great age exempted him from a levy the Sheriff retraced his steps to town, a distance of nine miles, to examine the code in reference thereto. He found that the mule's age was no bar to a levy, and went back and found that the owner had availed himself of the interim to run the male off .- Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

A California Judge has decided that a man cannot recover damages from parents who ejected him from their house for frightening their baby into spasms while attempting to kiss it. Good for him! The baby has been put upon too long. Why should he be kissed by old and young, and by invalids of every name and variety, whether he will or no, and nobody rise and protest? Let it be known that the man or woman who kisses a baby here-after, without first obtaining the con-sent of the baby and the baby's guar-dian, must do it at his own risk, and not altogether at the risk of the baby, as hitherto. - Roston Transcript.

Some German bulls are quite as amusing as their own famous Irish rivals. The idea of the Chinaman is that when he dies he ought to be buried in the trunk of a tree, and so it comes about that all coffins are designed with a view to keep up the illusion. They consist af four outside tree-boards, and are so fashioned together as to look very like a tree at a little distance.
They are, of course, tremenduously heavy, but then that is considered an excellent fault. If a son wishes to be excellent tant. If a son wishes to be very polite to his father, or one friend desires to obtain the good-will of another, he makes him a present of a good, solid, heavy coffin. The gift is put in an honored place in the house, ready for use; and is shown for the ad-Burlington Free Press.

Trousers with two legs are a pair; a shirt with two arms is only one shirt.

The owner would rather go into his coffin than part with it; and generally speaking, though a Chinaman may get into debt and be very harshly treated by his creditors, they will leave his coffin, not wishing to prejudice his entry into the next world, which, according to the Celestials, depends very much upon the way in which a man is buried. Greensborough has a certain young gentleman who has lately been en-chained in the silken fetters of Cupid, and thoughts of the fair enchantres constantly fill his mind. When Sunday comes he visits her, armed with the note-book, and proceeds to read therefrom the most tender expressions which have occurred to him from time to time. Amputation of the Leg.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a craic or a fool will affect to deepise it. Mr. Abram Klisworth, of Port Ewen, Ulster County, N. Y., had realized this truth. His disease involved the whole of his thigh-bone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only delivery. The family physicians reject to apputate the limb assection that clans refused to amputate the limb, asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. David KENNEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consulted, held a different optoton and amputate the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood Specific FAORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system and prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elizaorth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offapring of foul blood, and Kennedy's EAVORITE REMEDY puri-fied the blood and restored the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you sufforing from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favortie acmedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a Dottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. David Kennedy, Hondout, N. Y.

To keep the blood pure is the principal end of inventions and discoveries in medicine. To this object probably mo one has contributed more signally than Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y. in the production of a medicine which has become famous under the title of the "PAVORITE REMEDY." It removes all impurities of the Hood, regulates the disordered Liver and Kidneys, cures Constipation, Dysepsia and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females.

Methods of Agriculture in the East. The methods of agriculture pursued in China and the tools used are of the rudest and most primitive form. Even an apology for a shovel is seldom to be met with, while the hoe is of a long, narrow, heavy blade, and is used for almost all purposes. It takes the piace of a shovel when soil is to be moved, as it is carried in shallow baskets depending from a yoke on the cooly's shoulders, and the hoe is used to scrape the earth into the baskets. After ploughing, and often without it, the earth is dug up and prepared for the seed by the hoe, and the growing plants are cultivated by its aid. The plough is a rough and clumsy affair, with only one "stilt," and only the point shod with iron. It loosens the soil, but turns a very slight furrow, from its narrowness. The harrow is more like the well-known form at home, and the rake when used at all, is formed of curved and split bamboo, but is frail and of little value. Farm carts or wagons are infrequent, very clumsy solid wooden wheels, and rudely fash oined. Thrashing is performed as in the times of Moses, by spreading the sheaves on an earthen thrashing floor and driving unmuzzled cattle over the grain to tread it out. Winnowing is done on the same floor by pouring the grain from uplifted baskets for the wind to drive away the chaff, with sometimes a huge fan wielded by an assistant cooly. Sometimes the grain is ground between mill-stones, the under one stationers der one stationary and the upper turn-ed by a bullock that travels in a circle. Sometimes two women grind at a mill as in the time of Herod of Galilee. Quite often a still ruder process is observed. A stone coping is firmly se in a continuous circle about a space of ground 15 or 20 feet in diameter. The coping has an unbroken groove cut in its upper surface V-shaped, and a circular stone, 3 feet in diameter, has it periphary hewn to fit in the groove, which is 5 inches or more in depth. Into this groove the grain is placed and the stone wheel revolves over it, its centre fixed to a pivot on the outer extremity of a beam, whose inner end is attached to a pivot in the centre of the inclosed space. A bullock hitched to the beam revolves the grinding stone, and in time the grain is crushed to powder. Nearly all burdens ly with all food vegetables.

The soil of the Island of Java is productive to a degree, the crudest implement serving the native. The plough s a crooked or bent stick, drawn by the buffaloes, and merely scrapes or scratches the top of the earth; the spade is never used, unless here and there on an estate under European management, and the hoe, an instrument in universal use, is a great, unwieldy, heavy, and "impossible" thing, at least twice the weight of our own. The primitiveness in implements for use in cultivating land, and tools ususe in cultivating land, and tools us-ually employed by husbandmen, is uni-versal; a simple hatchet, for instance, is rarely seen in the hands of a native; an ax is also a rara avis, though both these tools are procurable. It will be understood, of course, that the mode of cultivation amongst the natives is 18 simple as their implements; the soil is so rich and nature so bountiful in this favored island that it takes but little that insects, disease, want of or too much rain, does not interfere.

Owing to the paucity of population of Asia Minor, when compared with the extent of arable territory, and to the fact that except for gardens, cotton and tobacco fields, fertilizing substan-ces are not used, the land is allowed to remain fallow every third year. Thus a field which is sown with a summer crop, such as Indian corn, millet, sesame, beans, vetch, etc., is sown again the following autumn with wheat, barey, or horse beans, etc., these being the winter crops; the third year it is not planted.

The agricultural implements in gen eral use are of the most primitive style and make. Oxen are used for plough ing and thrashing purposes. The yoke is a long straight stick, usually fastened to the horns. The plough is simply a triangular block of hard wood, with an iron cap on the point, one pole in front, to which the oxen are fasten-ed, and one behind to guide it. The other implements are the harrow, rake, sickle, spade, pickaxe, shovel, pitch-fork, sieve, winnow, and clumsy low-wheeled bullock cart, all of which the least progressive of our American farmers would scorn to use. The ploughing is about four inches deep, with a space between each furrow of twelve inches or more. Irrigation is confined to vegetable gardens, although there is seldom any rainfall from May to October. With such methods of cultivation, barley and wheat yield about twelve-fold, beans from twenty to twenty-five, millet, and maize from twenty-five to thirty-five. The thrashing of cereals is performed by horses and bullocks; beans and sessame by flail or stick. The straw, after thrashing is cut up and used as fodder for cattle. Of the smaller articles above enumerated, the pitchfork is of wood, a mere crotched stick; pickaxes, hoes, spades and scythes are made here party of iron, are imported from France. To induce the peasants to adopt more modern hand tools is not so casy as the introduction of labor-saving machinery, but it may be done in time and by per-severing effort through the large proportions. What the Brain Does.

It is a well-known fact that people whose limbs have been amoutated tell you that they feel their fingers and toes a long time afterward-for years, sometimes-and will even descibe pains and definite sensations affecting certain joints of individual digits. This is readily understood when we remember that the brain is the only part of the body that feels, all sensations and impulses being conveyed to it from different parts of nerve fibres. Feelings of pain, heat, cold, touch, and the functions of the special senses are telegraphed to it: and when the connecting nerve is divided it may be some time before it learns to localize truly the seat of the sensation it appreciates.
When we knock our "funny bones"
we experience a thrill in the little finger and inner border of the hand: the fact being that we have stimulated the bundle of telegraph wires-known as the ulnor nerve-which transmits sensations from that finger and part of the next, in the middle of its course, as it winds round the joint of the eldow.

A brilliant black varaish for iron, stone, wood, or concrete can be made by stirring up ivory black in ordinary shellae varnish. It ought to be applied to the surface when the article to be coated is cold. The varnish does well for stoves or fireplaces.

DR. J. A. SHERMAN—Dear Friend: I am sorry, Doctor, you have left Boston. Persons continue to come to my house to inquire respecting you, while many others write me. Many who left me said they would surely seek your aid. Your success has been wonderful, and I am quite sure without a parallel. To my surprise my large Hermia appears to be perfectly healed. I did not expect it at the age of 70. After receiving your freatment I was rolleved from suffering which was taking my life. I have no more than them. I think you not taken my case in band. I weigh now 170 pounds, over thirty pounds more than them. I think you must receive a great amount of happiness from the relief given and grattinde rendered.

You owe it to my son in Boston, who has known many of your patients before and after healing that I applied to you. "Go," said he, "to br. Sherman; he is doing wonders." I had falled of help from a dozen others and coulted, but he would not be me rest till I went. I best she day I did sh.
