SELECT STORY.

QUITE AN ADVENTURE. BY J. L. JETT.

A good many years have passed since one bitterly cold night, the last night of the old year...

Another prominent doctor of Providence says that I am frequently asked to give my opinion on the merits of the various remedies...

An Old Lady. "My mother, 70 years old, has chronic kidney complaint and dropsy. Nothing has ever helped her but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

A Minister's Wife. Rev. Anthony Atwood, of Philadelphia, says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for several years, and I can say that it has done me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken."

General Case. General Case of Rhode Island says: "I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in my house. Taken in small doses occasionally at night, it prevents headache, and regulates the kidneys, stomach and other organs."

Disseas soon shaken, by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. C. N. CRISTON, N. Y., General Agent.

PARKER'S HAIR BALM. The popular favorite for dressing the hair, restoring the color, and preventing dandruff. It cleanses the scalp, keeps the hair falling, and restores the hair to its natural color.

PARKER'S TONIC. The Best Cough Cure you can use and the best tonic preventive of Consumption. It is a powerful blood purifier and a general tonic for the system.

What there is in a Bottle. Sufficient to stop in five minutes the most violent hemorrhage. Applied to the face, it relieves the pain of a severe headache.

CHOKING. More than enough to save a case of Choking. It is a powerful expectorant and a general tonic for the system.

WHEEZING. In the above case Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil can be relied upon. It has given relief to thousands. Keep it in your house. There is hardly a week of the year it will not be useful.

ORNAMENTAL IRON FENCES OF CAST OR WROUGHT IRON. Suitable for Yards, Cemetery Lots and Public Grounds.

The following shows the Pocket Gothic, one of the several beautiful styles of Fence manufactured by the undersigned.

For Beauty and Durability they are unsurpassed. Set up by experienced hands and warranted to give satisfaction.

Prices and specimens of other designs sent to any address. Address S. M. HESS, BLOOMSBURG, PA.

THE DETECTIVE.

me to the station at York, and—" "But I must, and will know more about this case than the detective.

"Mr. Lawson," shouted the girl, impatiently, "will you please come here a moment?"

"Oh, say we are your friends!" pleaded the old lady. "I will give you a full explanation afterward."

"Well," said I, as I joined the two men.

"I am really ashamed to trouble you, sir," answered the guard, "but this man will not take my word for it that those ladies are your friends."

"Perhaps he will take mine," said I.

"Then they really are friends of yours?" interrogated the detective.

"Certainly! They are going with me to Newcastle," I answered.

I left the fellow in the midst of his apologies for troubling the advice given him by the guard.

"I am not in your hands, sir," the old lady said, rising, and taking the hat and veil from off the head of the younger one, displayed to my sight not the blond beauty I had been dreaming about, but a woman of middle age.

"I don't understand," said I slowly, trying to take in all the facts of the case.

"Then you are really the people I was told were in the carriage?" "Yes," answered the old lady, finishing the sentence for me, "we really are the people the detective is looking for, but, oh, sir, have pity on us!"

"I will get you a foot-warmer; you will need it to night," said the guard, as he went to the door.

"Thanks! Bring one for these ladies as well," returned I.

But traveling was heavy work, as the rails were encumbered with snow.

The old lady indeed looked to what I had to say, and again ventured a remark on her own account; but the young one merely gave monosyllabic replies to any observations addressed to her.

At length I gave up all efforts at conversation and sat wondering who my fellow-passengers were, and devising a scheme by which I could make the young lady throw back her eyes at me.

"Presently I opened the window and attempted to look out; but instantly there was such a shower of fine white snow that I was compelled to close it again quickly.

"The ladies shivered, and I at once offered my coat to the older lady and then more carefully and tenderly folded my plaid about the younger one.

At last we ran into Darlington station; and, as I hastily ordered portwine negus to be brought to us as hot as it could be made, I looked in the thought that at least I should get a glimpse of the young lady's face.

"You had better keep down your veil, dear," the old lady said, turning to her companion; "this wind will make your toothache worse."

"After this I sat down in sullen silence to brood over my ill-luck.

"Travelling grew worse. The old lady was evidently agitated. She slipped her hand in the young lady's muff—evidently for sympathy.

"I am afraid we shall not get into Newcastle to-night," said I, bending toward them.

"Surely!" burst from both their lips in such consternation as made me sorry to have imparted such disagreeable information.

"But we must be in Newcastle to-night!" said the elder lady irrationally.

"Do you really think there is no possibility of arriving to-night?" "I am afraid not, madam," said I; "but if your business is very urgent, I will try to get a telegram sent for you from the next station—that is, if the wires are all right."

"There is no need, thank you," replied the young lady quickly.

"No, thank you," echoed the elder one. "I was but reflecting on the unpleasant position we should be placed in as two unprotected ladies. My daughter too has not been well for some time."

"Of course I offered my protection, and secretly felt glad at the probability of spending several hours in the company of 'my daughter.'"

"As I finished speaking, we came to a dead stand. In a few seconds the guard opened the carriage door.

"We shall be obliged to stay here for the night, Mr. Lawson," he said; "there is a regular block. Lucky job there is some cottages just near."

"Send to engage at least one room for me and my friends," requested I.

"This young lady is not well, and would be glad to get to bed, I dare say, if such a luxury of a bed can be procured."

"All right, sir," said he.

"I was positively informed," said some one in a loud voice, "that the party I want to find took this train at York, and I have the warrant for his apprehension."

"Both ladies trembled violently as we passed the man."

"Well, you see he is not here, answered the guard. "You have seen all the passengers."

"All but those," said the stranger, pointing toward us.

"That is young Mr. Lawson!" cried the guard, "that is young Mr. Lawson!"

"Yes, yes," allowed the detective—for it was no other—"I know him; but those ladies!"

"They are his friends. Come with me to the station at York, and—"
