

Published Weekly, every Friday Morning, at BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Subscription rates: $1.00 per annum in advance.

Professional Cards: L. E. WALLER, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

N. C. PUNK, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

JOHN M. CLARK, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

C. W. MILLER, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

B. FRANK ZAER, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

ED. E. ELLYELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

PAUL E. WIRT, Attorney-at-Law.

J. H. MAIZE, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

JOHN C. YOCUM, C. E. GEYER, YOCUM & GEYER, Attorneys-at-Law.

A. K. OSWALD, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

W. H. RHAWN, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

H. V. WHITE, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

W. E. SMITH, Attorney-at-Law.

C. G. BARKLEY, Attorney-at-Law.

J. B. McKEELY, M. D., Surgeon and Physician.

A. L. FRITZ, Attorney-at-Law.

M. DRINKER, GUN & LOCKSMITH.

D. R. J. C. RUTTER, Physician and Surgeon.

D. R. WM. M. REBER, Surgeon and Physician.

J. R. EVANS, M. D., Surgeon and Physician.

FIRE INSURANCE: CHRISTIAN P. KNAPP, BLOOMSBURG.

AMERICAN INSURANCE COMPANIES.

Scranton House, ON THE EUROPEAN PLAN.

Victor Koch, Proprietor.

WANTED: BELLEFLEUR MEN to sell.

Scranton House, ON THE EUROPEAN PLAN.

Victor Koch, Proprietor.

WANTED: BELLEFLEUR MEN to sell.

Scranton House, ON THE EUROPEAN PLAN.

Victor Koch, Proprietor.

WANTED: BELLEFLEUR MEN to sell.

Scranton House, ON THE EUROPEAN PLAN.

Victor Koch, Proprietor.

WANTED: BELLEFLEUR MEN to sell.

Scranton House, ON THE EUROPEAN PLAN.

LOTS OF PEOPLE SAY, "OH MY BACK!" Here is Sold A TESTIMONY from Hard Working Men.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE COD LIVER OIL. Almost as Palatable as Milk.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM. The Best Hair Dressing.

PARKER'S TONIC. The Best Tonic.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Purify the Blood.

SHARP PAINS! ARE CURED BY THE HOP PLASTER.

My Back Aches!

ORNAMENTAL IRON FENCES. Suitable for Yards, Cemetery Lots and Public Grounds.

S. M. HESS, BLOOMSBURG, PA.

The Columbian. BLOOMSBURG, PA., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1885.

RATES OF ADVERTISING. Table with columns for ad type and duration.

SELECT STORY. A LOVER'S GALE.

"Just look and listen, girls! What a wind storm for the first of May!

"Good-bye," responded Miss Myers, and tried to smile as she spoke; but when the door closed and she was alone she bent over the machine with a very grave face and a mind that was not so much absorbed in her work as in the associations and recollections of this solemn holiday never failed to awaken.

"I must open it myself—there's no body else," and she hurried out to the stairs. I dare say it's only the milliner's boy with Miss Helen's bonnet.

"Yes, ever since I came back from Europe ten years ago," is the reply. "I was sent there by the doctors to recover from the effects of a wound, and I wrote you nearly a dozen letters then, knew, though, it was only because you never received them, that they were not answered."

"And I have interrupted your trip, says Agnes a few minutes later, looking up with a smile.

"Of course there was great excitement when the family returned and heard of the romantic happenings during their absence. Mrs. Ronkel was most hearty in her congratulations, and Belle indignantly chided that May wind storm 'the lover's gale'."

"John Gorman, a resident of Hazleton, and one of the leading members of the Luzerne County Bar, has been placed in a very awkward position by developments brought out in court last week.

"There was a pause, while Miss Myers stood near the instrument, clonking the bar piece as if it had been a rope that was to save her from drowning. By a supreme effort of will she had recovered from the shock the mention of that name had given her, and now her brain was reeling with doubt, uncertainty and longing.

DEATH OF GEN. MCCELLAN.

General George B. McClellan died suddenly at three o'clock Thursday morning (last week) at his country residence, St. Cloud, Orange Mountain, N. J.

"The Mexican war was then in progress, and the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma had just recently been fought. Young McClellan was given a lieutenantcy in a company of sappers and miners and went immediately to join the American army in Mexico.

"After his service in Mexico he was stationed with his company at West Point. He left West Point in June, 1851, having been ordered to assist in constructing the works at Fort Delaware.

"In April, 1861, he was summoned to Columbus, O., and requested by Gov. Dennison to organize the volunteers that were flocking in from all directions.

"The President sent the following telegram of condolence to Mrs. McClellan: 'I am shocked by the news of your husband's death, and while I know how futile are all human efforts to console, I feel that my sympathy in your great grief and expression to you my own sense of affliction at the loss of so good a friend.'

"The death of General B. McClellan, at one time the Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, took place at an early hour Thursday morning.

"With profound regret the Secretary of War announced to the army the death of General George B. McClellan, formerly Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, which occurred at Orange, N. J., Thursday morning.

"It was just previous to this change of base that he sent the ever-memorable despatch to Secretary Stanton, the closing words of which are as follows: 'I feel too earnestly to-night, I have seen too many dead and wounded comrades to feel otherwise than that the Government has not sustained this army. If you do not see so now the army is lost. If I have this army now I tell you plainly I owe no thanks to

THE FATAL ATTACK.

At 10:45 o'clock General McClellan left his daughter and her friend and started to go up stairs to bed. Immediately he was seized by a severe attack of neuralgia, which was heard of by the doctor.

"The tremendous strength of the General's constitution gave the Doctor hopes that he would live through the attack, which, however, lasted for eleven o'clock until three o'clock. Throughout these four hours of torment McClellan wrestled with a foe more unrelenting than he had ever met when the Southern chivalry were arrayed against him.

"Then he sank back upon the pillow, as if exhausted, closing his eyes. The doctor, who was watching his face with extreme solicitude, saw the unerring signs of approaching collapse and despair.

"The President sent the following telegram of condolence to Mrs. McClellan: 'I am shocked by the news of your husband's death, and while I know how futile are all human efforts to console, I feel that my sympathy in your great grief and expression to you my own sense of affliction at the loss of so good a friend.'

"The death of General B. McClellan, at one time the Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, took place at an early hour Thursday morning.

"With profound regret the Secretary of War announced to the army the death of General George B. McClellan, formerly Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, which occurred at Orange, N. J., Thursday morning.

"It was just previous to this change of base that he sent the ever-memorable despatch to Secretary Stanton, the closing words of which are as follows: 'I feel too earnestly to-night, I have seen too many dead and wounded comrades to feel otherwise than that the Government has not sustained this army. If you do not see so now the army is lost. If I have this army now I tell you plainly I owe no thanks to

"The Mexican war was then in progress, and the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma had just recently been fought. Young McClellan was given a lieutenantcy in a company of sappers and miners and went immediately to join the American army in Mexico.

PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS.

Gen. McClellan was a man of most distinguished bearing. Although small in stature—the 'Little Mac' of army days and unbounded popularity with his soldiers—he was a marked figure in any company.

"The Mexican war was then in progress, and the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma had just recently been fought. Young McClellan was given a lieutenantcy in a company of sappers and miners and went immediately to join the American army in Mexico.

"After his service in Mexico he was stationed with his company at West Point. He left West Point in June, 1851, having been ordered to assist in constructing the works at Fort Delaware.

"In April, 1861, he was summoned to Columbus, O., and requested by Gov. Dennison to organize the volunteers that were flocking in from all directions.

"The President sent the following telegram of condolence to Mrs. McClellan: 'I am shocked by the news of your husband's death, and while I know how futile are all human efforts to console, I feel that my sympathy in your great grief and expression to you my own sense of affliction at the loss of so good a friend.'

"The death of General B. McClellan, at one time the Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, took place at an early hour Thursday morning.

"With profound regret the Secretary of War announced to the army the death of General George B. McClellan, formerly Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, which occurred at Orange, N. J., Thursday morning.

"It was just previous to this change of base that he sent the ever-memorable despatch to Secretary Stanton, the closing words of which are as follows: 'I feel too earnestly to-night, I have seen too many dead and wounded comrades to feel otherwise than that the Government has not sustained this army. If you do not see so now the army is lost. If I have this army now I tell you plainly I owe no thanks to

THE PENINSULAR CAMPAIGN.

The Mexican war was then in progress, and the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma had just recently been fought. Young McClellan was given a lieutenantcy in a company of sappers and miners and went immediately to join the American army in Mexico.

"The Mexican war was then in progress, and the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma had just recently been fought. Young McClellan was given a lieutenantcy in a company of sappers and miners and went immediately to join the American army in Mexico.

"After his service in Mexico he was stationed with his company at West Point. He left West Point in June, 1851, having been ordered to assist in constructing the works at Fort Delaware.

"In April, 1861, he was summoned to Columbus, O., and requested by Gov. Dennison to organize the volunteers that were flocking in from all directions.

"The President sent the following telegram of condolence to Mrs. McClellan: 'I am shocked by the news of your husband's death, and while I know how futile are all human efforts to console, I feel that my sympathy in your great grief and expression to you my own sense of affliction at the loss of so good a friend.'

"The death of General B. McClellan, at one time the Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, took place at an early hour Thursday morning.

"With profound regret the Secretary of War announced to the army the death of General George B. McClellan, formerly Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, which occurred at Orange, N. J., Thursday morning.

"It was just previous to this change of base that he sent the ever-memorable despatch to Secretary Stanton, the closing words of which are as follows: 'I feel too earnestly to-night, I have seen too many dead and wounded comrades to feel otherwise than that the Government has not sustained this army. If you do not see so now the army is lost. If I have this army now I tell you plainly I owe no thanks to

DESTROY OFFENSIVE ORDERS.

There is no means more certain to bring disease upon members of a family than allowing infectious matter to remain upon the premises.

"The Mexican war was then in progress, and the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma had just recently been fought. Young McClellan was given a lieutenantcy in a company of sappers and miners and went immediately to join the American army in Mexico.

"The Mexican war was then in progress, and the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma had just recently been fought. Young McClellan was given a lieutenantcy in a company of sappers and miners and went immediately to join the American army in Mexico.

"After his service in Mexico he was stationed with his company at West Point. He left West Point in June, 1851, having been ordered to assist in constructing the works at Fort Delaware.

"In April, 1861, he was summoned to Columbus, O., and requested by Gov. Dennison to organize the volunteers that were flocking in from all directions.

"The President sent the following telegram of condolence to Mrs. McClellan: 'I am shocked by the news of your husband's death, and while I know how futile are all human efforts to console, I feel that my sympathy in your great grief and expression to you my own sense of affliction at the loss of so good a friend.'

"The death of General B. McClellan, at one time the Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, took place at an early hour Thursday morning.

"With profound regret the Secretary of War announced to the army the death of General George B. McClellan, formerly Major General Commanding the Army of the United States, which occurred at Orange, N. J., Thursday morning.