contract for the erection of a new courthouse and jail. It appeared that of the constitutional provision which prohibits any municipality from increasing its indebtedness to an amount exceeding 2 per centum upon the a-sessed valuation of property without the assent of the electors at a public elect-ion. It futher appeared that the assent of the electors had not been given to the creation of the debt in question, and that if the offices, posts of profit and occupations were excluded from the assessed valuation the debt would be in excess of the 2 per centum allowed by the constitution. The Supreme Court decides, moreover, that the County Commissioners had a right to adopt the valuation of the preceding assessment as the basis of their action in making the contract without inquiring as to whether the articles included in said valuation were properly taxable or not.
