

The Assassination of Abraham Lincoln April 14th 1865.

On the 14th day of April 1865 Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, was shot in Ford's Theatre in Washington, by John Wilkes Booth.

It seems but a few years ago that the country was shocked by the death of its chief officer, and yet a whole generation has grown up since that time, and many men who will vote next fall were not born then.

Mr. Lincoln was invited by the manager of Ford's theatre, in Washington, to attend in the evening a performance of the play "The American Cousin," with Laura Keane as the leading lady.

The play was now so well known to all play goers, and in which the late Northern afterward made fortune and fame, was then comparatively unheralded.

Booth entered the theatre nonchalantly, glanced at the stage with apparent interest, then he slowly walked toward the box occupied by the president.

Booth deliberately had planned that the very seats in the box were arranged to suit his purpose by an accomplice.

The assassin swiftly entered the box through the door at the right, and the next instant fired. The ball entered just behind the president's left ear, though not producing instantaneous death, completely obliterated all consciousness.

Maj. Rathbone heard the report, and an instant later saw the murderer, about six feet from the president, and grappled with him, but his grasp was shaken off.

He crouched as he fell, falling upon one knee, but soon straightened himself and stalked theatrically across the stage, brandishing his knife and shouting the state motto of Virginia.

It had all been done so quickly and dramatically that many in the audience were dazed and could not understand that anything was a part of the plot that had happened.

They carried him immediately to the house of Mr. Peterson, opposite the theatre, and there, at 7:22 the next morning, the 13th of April, he died.

Mr. Lincoln's body was embalmed, and on the following Wednesday funeral services were held in the East room of the White House.

On the 21st of the month the casket was taken to Washington, and on the following day it was taken to Philadelphia and New York, and then moved westward.

Just then Sgt. Boston Corbett fled through a crevice and shot Booth in the back.
