dition than if they had been left to the uncertain charity of the world.

I therefore deem it my duty to refer the testimony taken at the investigation to you for official action. My own powers in the premises, either to cor-rect the evils or to punish the offenders, are, unhappily, very limited. Such as they are, however, I shall exercise them. I have removed the two Inspectors. The Superintendent of Public Instruction is not subject to summary removal by me, but I have this day requested his resignation in order that a recoveration of the order that a reorganization of the schools may be accomplished. The General Assembly not being in session, no legislation can now be had. There is nothing, therefore, that I can now do beyond what I have stated, except to request you to exhaust all the power LONDON AND NEW YORK.

of your department to punish those | 532-536 WASHINGTON ST. NEW YORK CITY who bave made themselves amenable to the criminal law, to enforce the rights of the State against those who have defrauded her, and to recover some of their ill-gotten gains, if possible, from those who have grown rich by dishonest dealings with the State. How far you can obtain this partial redress for the State I am unable to determine. I am certain, however, that in your hands all the rights of the Commonwealth will be zealously enforced, and that her cause will be ably represented by you in her courts of justice. Robert E. Talmage on Newspapers.

Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage preached a sermon last Sunday on newspapers. He is evidently acquainted with his subject. Among other things he says: The newspaper is the great educator of the Nineteenth Century. There is no force compared with it. It is book, pulpit, platform, forum, all in one. And there is not an interest-religious, literary, commercial, scientific, agricul tural, or mechanical—that is not within its grasp. All our churches and schools and colleges and asylums and art galleries feel the quaking of the printing press.

One of the great trials of this newspaper profession is the fact that they are compelled to see more of the shams are compelled to see more of the shams of the world than any other profession. Through every newspaper office, day by day, go the weaknesses of the world the vanities that want to be puffed, the revenges that want to be wreaked, all the mistakes that want to be corrected. all the dull speakers who want to be thought eloquent, all the meanness that wants to get its wares noticed gratis in the editorial columns in order to save the tax of the advertising column, all the men who want to be set right who never were right, all the crack-brained philosophers, with a story as long as their hair, and as gloomy as their finger-nails, in mourning because bereft of soap; all the itinerant bores who come to stay five minutes and stop an bour. From the editorial and reportorial rooms, all the follies and shams of the world are seen day by day, and the temptation is to believe neither in God. man or woman. It is no surprise to me that in your profession there are some skeptical men. I only wonder that you believe anything. Unless an editor or a reporter has in his present or his early home a model of earnest character, or he throws himself upon the upholding grace of God, be must make temporal and eternal shipwreck:

Another great trial of the newspaper profession is in adequate compensation. Since the days of Hazlitt, and Sheridar, and John Milton, and the wailings of Grub street, London, literary toil, with very few exceptions has not been properly requited. When Oliver Goldsmith received a friend in his house, he, the author, had to sit on the window because there was only one chair. Lin-nieus sold his splendid work for a ducat. Dr. Foe, the author of 218 volumes, died penniless. The learned Johnson diped behind a screen because his clothes were too shabby to allow him to dine with the gentlemen who, on the other side of the screen were applauding his works. And so on down to the present time, literary toil is a great struggle for bread. The world seems to have a grudge against a man who, as they say, gets his living by his wits, and the day laborer says to the man of literary toil: "You come down here, and shove a plane, and hanmer a shoe-last and break cobblestones, and earn an honest living as I do, instead of sitting there in idleness, scribling!" But God knows that there are no harder worked men in all the earth than the newspaper people of this country. is not a matter of hard times: it characteristic of all times. Men have a better appreciation for that which a better appreciation for that which appeals to the stomach, than for that which appeals to the brain. They have no idea of the immense financial and intellectual exhaustions of the newspaper press. They grumble be cause they have to pay five cents a copy, and wish they had only to pay three, or paying three, they wish they had only to pay one. While there are a few exceptions—and some few do make arge fortunes-the vast majority of newspaper people in this day have a struggle for livelihood; and in their hardship and exasperation they sometimes write things they ought not to write; let these facts be an alleviation. O men of the press, it will be a great help to you, if when you come home late at night, fagged out and nervous with your work, you would just kneel down and commend your case to God, who has watched all the fatigue of that day, and who has promised to be your God and the God of your children for-

Best Keeping Grapes.

D. S. Marvin, the veteran grape grower, says: It is being generally conceded that health is conserved by eating fruit in winter: that grapes are much superior to other kinds of fruit for hygienic uses, as they are more delicate, furnished with higher medicinal as well as nutritious qualities, I desire therefore to record a few notes as to the keeping canabilities of our as to the keeping capabilities of our several classes, their hybrids and va-rities. I started in with some 32 va-rities, picked and laid in boxes, and stored in a cool room until freezing weather, when they were carried to an ordinary cellar. I prefer this simple plan after having in former years tested all the various ways of storing them (I have no facilities for cold storage), because they seem to retain their flavor, can be inspected at any time and seem less subject to decay.

The chief dangers to be guarded against are, first, drying or shrinking; this can be met by picking late and keeping the room cool. Second, dampness of the cellar, causing the stems to mould; this I met by bringing the trays into a dry heated room for a day, then returning them to the cellar, for if the returning them to the cellar, for if the stems are kept from molding, the grapes keep as well as apples. This is always the danger point; and must be met by carefully watching and con-trolling by drying; dry air is always a fatal enemy to the germination and growth of all cryptogamic life. When this care is given we can keep grapes all winter as well as other fruit. But not all kinds of grapes ; there is as much difference in the keeping capa-bilities of our different classes, their hybrids and varieties, as there is in our lifferent varieties of apples. We do not now distinguish and pay sufficient attention to growing the best keeping varieties. Indeed it is very unfortu-nate that our Northern Labrusca varieties are most cultivated; we thereby deprive ourselves of the benefits of this fruit in winter when we need it most. This class of grapes are all temporary, the Concord family among the worst offenders, consequently of the least public value; nor will they even make a decent wine. They are fruity, not vinous, hardiness of vine their only redeeming quality; they should only be grown where other and better grapes do not succeed.

Out of the 30 and more varieties saved for my experiment, Concord, Champion, Cottage, Delaware, Early Victor, Eva, Elvira, Hartford, Lady, Martha, Moore's, Pocklington, Worden and Victoria lost flavor, decayed and were gone mouths ago. The next to 6 58 10 41 this fruit in winter when we need it saved for my experiment, Concord, Champion, Cottage, Delaware, Early Victor, Eva, Elvira, Hartford, Lady, Martha, Moore's, Pocklington, Worden and Victoria lost flavor, deceyed and were gone months ago. The next to go were Adirondack, Brighton, Belvi-dere, Humbolt, Israella, Telegraph, Union Village, Vergennes, Walter and Wyoming Red.

Those that I have now, February 10, in good eating condition are Agawam, Catawbs, Eumelan, Iona, Lindley, Merrimac, Salem, Wilder, and a new white seedling of Eumelan that I have named Julia that keeps better than its

It will be observed that Brighton and some of the other foreign hybrids do not keep well; this is explained by their past Concord parentage. Another result shown is that hybrids between our Æstivals and the foreigners keep better than Northern Labrusca and for-eign hybrids. I also saved fruit from a number of our new grapes but hard-ly enough to record careful experiments. I place Lindley at the head as the best grape and the best keeper of the old Husbands and Wives.

Ingratitude and indfference someimes mar the character of men. A husband returns from his business at evening. During his absence, and throughout the live-long day, the wife has been busy with mind and hands preparing some little surprise, some unexpected pleasure to make his home more attractive than ever. He enters, seemingly sees no more of what has been done to please him than if he were a blind man, and has nothing more to say about it than if he were dumb. Many a loving wife has borne in her heart an abiding sorrow, day after day, from causes like this, until in process of time, the fire and enthusiasm of her original nature have burned out, and mutual indifference spreads its pall over the household. Praise your wife, man ; notice what she does to please you, and you will both be happier than you are to-day.

Many women have little idea how greatly they shock the tastes and really endanger the affections of their hus-bands by their slatternal apparel There is not a man of sense and refined feeling anywhere who does not like to see his wife neatly attired. Let a woman by all means dress brilliantly on those occasions that render it proper we have no desire to abridge her privileges nor baffle her instincts in this particular ; but we claim it proper for her, if she values her household serenity, that she should give equal heed to her customary domestic attire. The wife who goes about the house untidily dressed has little right to the title of lady. She is without those marks and indications by which she can be classified.

It is better to yield a little than quarrel a good deal. The habit of standing up, as people call it, for their rights, is one of the most disagreeable and undignified in the world. Life is too short for the perpetual bickerings which attend such dispositions; and unless a very momentous affair indeed, where other people's claims and interests are involved, it is a question if it is not wiser, happier and more prudent to yield somewhat of our petty rights than squabble to maintain them .- N
