HARVEST HYMN.

BY JOHN SUTTON, God of all favor, now to thee, Our hearts in grateful praise arise, Thy goodness every where we see, Thy hand our every want supplies The seasons in their annual round, As each the other doth succeed, Are with peculiar blessings crowned, Each blessing suited to our need.

We cast the seed into the ground, And leave it there at thy command, We in thy promise surely trust, Relieving that thy word shall stand. Though beath the winter's snow and fros 'Tis hid away from human sight, We know our labor is not lost, Thou doest all things, well and right.

The days of spring come hastening on.
Thou givest the sunshine and the rain
The snows of winter soon are gone,
And we behold the living grain. The heads and biessoms soon appear,
With lengthning stocks and spreadi
We need but pluck the ripened ear,
And gather in the golden sheaves. Thy goodness, Lord, again we tell, As pouring from thy gracious hand, A bounteous crop our garners fill And plenty crowns our favored land.

Our hearts to thee once more we lift, To thee stone our thanks belong. For every good and needful gift. Accept the tribute of our song. Illwater, Aug. 23, 1886.

SELECT STORY.

THE TURKET DOOR.

It was a beautiful and still evening toward the end of summer, when ir the course of my wanderings about the ancient city I entered the quiet and solitary close of the gray cathedral. The rooks were gathering in the old elms which stood around. A ruddy light wrapped the great gray towers which rose far up into the even-ing air. The sounds of the city from without came faintly and at intervals to the ear as I walked slowly across the close toward the low wide steps which ascended and were lost in the which ascended and were lost in the shadow of the noble porch.

On reaching the great door of the cathedral I found it closed. But in the center of this there was anothor smaller door which still stood open—sud here a party of visitors, to whom I was a stranger, were endeavoring to persuade the ancient verger that the hour was not yet too late to permit them to inspect the interior. It so happened that just as I came up they succeeded in overcoming his hesita-tion, and he turned to lead the way in-

The party of visitors to which I had joined myself had completed, under the guidance of the verger, the custoprepared reluctantly to turn away.

Suddenly my eye was caught by a portion of the carving which seemed to stand out slightly from the rest. I the Apostle Peter and pulled it outward. To my amazement a door opened in the carving, showing beyond it a dark passage. I stooped forward and looked in. As I did so the door, which was thick and massive, and which was hung slantingly upon its hinges in such a manner as to close its own weight, swung heavily back rom the position into wnich I had pushed it and coming unexpectedly upon me as I stooped forward, projected me into the opening and shut behind me. The suddenness of the incident and the total darkness in which I found myself entombed startled and confused me. But at first I felt no positive darm. I attempted at once to push open the door, but to my surprise it did not yield. I pushed harder-harder yet-I exerted all my strength, out the door remained immovable.

At last, finding all my efforts usetiess, I endeavored to attract the attention of those outside. I raised my voice and called loudly for assistance at the same time beating a vigorous tattoo with my stick against the door. I then paused and listened, in the expectation of being speedily released. But to my surprise and alarm the min-ites passed and there was no response.

With a vague terror at heart I rewed my endeavors. I raised a clamor hat awoke the echoes of the building. But still no voice replied from outside ny prison, no hand released the fastenag of the door. Gradually the conviction forced itself upon my mind that I had delayed too long. While I had been trying to force open the door by my own efforts, the party of visi-tors had left the cathedral, either without observing my absence, or perhaps upposing that I had left before them, The verger had locked up the building and departed. There was no one within hearing to assist me.

My consternation at this discovery may be conceived. The idea that I was fated to pass the night in this dark away from it to examine more narrowly the place of my imprisonment. Nothing now seemed left to me but to ascertain how I might pass the hours with least discomfort, until I might expect assistance from without.

In my assaults upon the door I had already discovered that the place in which I was inclosed was of small di and afterward with extreme perplexity without motion.

Between the roof and the wall there

I sat for a long time in reflection no longer occupied my thoughts.

I began instead to be curiously disnounced all such expectations.

as best I might. How slowly the time waned! At How slowly the time waned: At seemingly long intervals the bells struck the quarters; one, two, three, four; and then in deeper tones the hour itself—7. And now, when the hour itself—7. And now, when the proposed of the last note had died shorically, half neconsciously, to this away, the bells of the carillon began to chime. The notes fell on my ears with the same singular and unaccountable distinctness which I had observed them to inspect the interior. It so was buried in darkness. I arose slowly happened that just as I came up they to my feet, and the scarcely formed conjecture of my mind was instantly confirmed. As I had expected, I could to the building.

The party followed him, and I among struck the roof. The whole truth mary tour of inspection round the ancient fabric, and were now preparing Yes—descending! During the hour ancient fabric, and were now preparing to leave the building. I had fallen for a moment behind the rest, in order to examine a fine and deeply interesting specimen of antique carving which I made it, so far from causing me persuper the whole of the value of the val covered the whole of the wall near plexity, at once revealed to me the wall. Aware that I had not much head. I now perceived that what I ime to linger unless I wished to be had taken for a solid heavy roof was ocked up all night, I cast a glance at in fact the massive and enormous the rich tapestry of the woodwork and weight of the great clock. I was imprisoned in the bottom of the shaft into which the weight descended. The ponderous block of solid metal was falling at the rate of about four inches out my hand upon the carved head of an hour, or rather more. In less time than it takes to trace these words, the consequence of this flashed through my mind. In fifteen hours the weight would descend through a space of five feet. Long before I could expect release, the enormous mass would be upon me, and would crush me helplessly against the pavement of my prison. My sensation upon making this discovery I will not attempt to describe.

Often -very often-in the course of my life, have I had occasion to remark the truth of the saying: "The avenues that lead to death are numerous and strange. Little did I think how nearly I was myself to afford an example of its truth. Yet surely no mortal was ever before the victim of an accident so wildly singular and so tull of horror! There the great weight was above me. Slowly, surely, it was creeping downward in the darkness and silence of the night.

And far up in the soft air of sunset the bells were still ringing the evening

For many minutes after making this discovery I remained motionless, striving vainly to realize the most singular yet deadly peril which threat-ened me. I do not know how long it was before I so far recovered my was before I so far recovered my faculties as to become capable of thought. At length, rousing myself by an effort to examine whether any way to escape lay open to me. I turned my attention to the interspace be tween the weight and the wall ; but it was far too narrow to admit the pass age of my body. Then—to such extremeties may desperation drive its victims—I thought of attempting to arrest the great weight by supporting it with my stick as it decended. I might as well have attempted to support a falling avalanche.

Then an idea occured to my mind which brought with it a gleam of hope. I thought it possible that by applying my strength to the weight it self, I might be able to impart to it and narrow prison was one which I re-fused to entertain. Again, again, and yet I huried myself against the wooden barrier, with rage, with fury, with despair. Not until I had exhausted byery effort in my power, not until every gleam of hope had vanished from which I had again sank down, I apmy mind, did I give up the attempt to plied my strength to the weight and force the door as hopeless, and turned by exerting all my energy in a successaway from it to examine more narrowion of rythmical impulses. I gradually succeeded in imparting to it an almost impreceptible movement. Gradually this increased; and but for an unfor seen circumstance the scheme might have been successful. But I presently found that the weight did not hang exactly in the centre of the shaft. The consequence of this was that it struck the floor, were of solid stone. Standing close to one of these, and casting my eyes upward, I made a discovery which filled me at first with surprise, and afterward with extreme perplexity.

Interpretation of the walls, like and dismay. I for the first time and alismay. I for the first time unorganized, but in their ranks appearing dood dollars, and everything isn't settled up yet. Make up your minds."

They did, and decided to accompany the floor of my prison, and lay there and afterward with extreme perplexity.

The fluent liberal orators called forth fled tones, they fell upon my ears with some stupefying or bewildered in-thrilling clearness and distinctness, as fluence, like that of the vapor which regarded only as the first instalment if they were close at hand. It was often gathers at the bottom of old evident, in fact, that my cell must be situated directly under the clock tower. This conclusion, however, led me no of indifference. The peril under which to the situation of the situation of my mind liberalism. His opponents were already impatient for much longer strides forward. The king's speech, which I lay ceased to trouble me, and at last reads like a chapter from the records upon the number of hours which must clapse before I could expect to be set free. The bell had struck the hour of six. The cathedral would probably not be open in the morning before 9 or 10. I had, therefore, some fifteen hours at least before me to get through as best I might.

I began instead to be curiously disturbed by another circumstance, very turbed by another circumstance, very turbed by assume that the senses from somewhere in the stillness; a sound low, muffled, throbbing and mysterious, like the beating of my own blood. Had my mind been clear I could not have failed to recognize it for what it was The sense. nize it for what it was. The sound seemed in my ears; but this was mere-chanically, half unconsciously, to this monotonous sound, broken at intervals by the notes of the deep-toned bell. At length, probably owing in great measure to the heavy effect of the air upon scended a great way, and was now close aboye my body. I could feel, though nothing touched me, the huge struck the roof. The whole truth flashed at once across my mind. I saw why the roof did not touch the walls of the inclosure, why it was formed of massive iron. It was descending.

Yes—descending! During the hour pense—at last—it touched me.
It touched me. At first lightly; then which I stood. The great door of the cathedral, where the rest of the party were now standing, was not visible from this spot; but I could hear their voices plainly, round the angle of the voices plainly, round the angle of the head. I now perceived that what I

The last minute of my life seemed to and resigned myself to die. Still a space the weight descended; my brain burden of the ponderous mass. The blood rushed in torrents to my head, I felt that my senses were leaving me.

Very suddenly the pressure ceased. I was conscious of a welcome relief. I drew in a deep breath, freely. I moved my limbs, and found their liberty no Hilarity with their bills until the first dream. The weight was gone !

I raised my hand and it encountered space. I gasping, staggered, to my feet. The weight was already above my head, and rising rapidly upward in-to the darkness of the shaft. A sound of moving mechanism reached me from above. I thought I heard the in the tower above me.

The purpose which had brought them there was evident; they were winding up the clock.

I remember little more, and that confusedly. I have some dim memory of an interval of silence, broken by voices outside my prison; of the sudden opening of the door, of a blinding light of a group of several forms without I seem to remember also that there were cries of wonder as I staggered from my narrow lodging and fell fainting into the arms of my deliverers. But these things are to me as the shadows of a dream. The rushing darkness returned upon me, and for many hours I

Such is the story of my strange adventure. I greatly doubt whether in all the chapter of accidents in history a stranger can be found. I have already stated that its truth is known to several persons, and that the strict accuracy of my account can be verified by simple inquiry. -Argosy.

By these ordinances he assembled at Berlin a union of these provincial hodies under the name of the united diets, and promised that no new loan in time of peace should be contracted without their consent, nor new imposts introduced, nor existing taxes increased without their concurrence. Ever since the national uprising of the wall opposite the door before it 1813 the desire of the people for con-reached the door itself. The extent of stitutional guarantees and for particithan a recess or deep niche in the many sonry, not exceeding three feet square, its swing being thus checked, my utility would neither enable me to lie at full length ner obtain any other relief for my tired limbs than by the change of one cramped and uneasy posture of one cramped and uneasy posture. Between the roof and the wall there was a space of at least four inches. Through this space I became aware of a faint gleam of light very far above my head. With the object of ascer taining the length of this aperture I moved along the wall, keeping my eye upon the crevice. The light did not vanish. I turned the angle of the wall and still the light remained visible. I traversed in succession the four walls of the cell, no obstacle obscured the feeble dream. The roof did not touch the wall at a single point of the circuit.

Presently a load and startling sound, seeming to issue from the roof above my head, burst suddenly upon the silence. It was the great clock of the cathedral striking the hour. The notes fell slowly from a deep, solemn and sonorous bell. But instead of reaching my prison, as might have been expected, in dull, far off and muffled tones, they fell upon my ears with the sile travers and distinctores are distinct that followed—those hours of more than mortal agony of mind. VACATION AT A SUMMER RESORT. THE ESTIMATED AND ACTUAL COST OF AN UNSATISFACTORY TRIP.

Mr. E. F. Hilarity, a prominent citizen who increased his cash account considerally during the past year, concluded to take his family to a Summer resort for a brief recreation.

Mrs. Hilarity has a fondness for "sossiety," and her two daughters, Arethusa and Mehnda, have reached the age when an advantageous match is not to be frowned at. The fond mamma has been considerably worried by 'Argie's predilection for a baker on Court street, and to remove the sweet girl from such dangerous influences was a powerful argument in the ears of the paternal Hilarity. The pater familias thought he'd do a little figuring on the probable cost of a two week's trip to a noted watering place. He got out his pencil, and, with his wife and two daughters at his elbow, made up an estimate of expenditures which he thought would prove approximately correct. Here it

These were almost inadequate to contain the immense quantity of new dresses, bonnets and other paraphernalia of a society woman's attire. The eventful day came. The express-wagon came murmur of voices; men were moving for the trunks. When Mr. Hilarity saw the pile of trunks he threw up both hands. "Great Scott, my dear, where did all those trunks come from? What are you going to do with them? Saratoga ought to be enough for a trip like this." With her blandest smile the better half spoke : "Now, dearest, Arethusa and Melin da must be brought out right. Would you want the poor dears to go away without any clothes?"

For lack of any further material for criticism, and still ignorant of the big bills awaiting his return, Hilarity held his peace. It cost $10 to carry the baggage to the train and another $10 for excess of baggage was collected by the ratiroad company.

"Now my dear," remarked the some what irate husband, not entirely subdued, "I'm really ashamed of you. People will think we are moving or that you are a lot of merchant travel-
