Wanamaker's. Figures of uncut loops of wool with gleaming outlines of mohair.

Massive stripes of long silk loops, half-an-inch long or more, thick enough to hang like a shaggy fur.

Soft wicking of mohair, innumerable bushy tails, on a plain woolen stuff.

Silver silk interspersed in masses of plush, apparently a notion derived from silver-beaver in furs a year or two ago.

Color-plaid of silk plush on wool diagonals. Herringbone ground with double plaid of fine plush colors.

Wide diagonal, stripes of shaggy out-hanging matted wool. Serge more or less covered with net-work of mohair cords.

Stripes of nothing but beads, jet beads on black and colored fabrics. Blocks of Persian colors and figures on stripes of silk plush.

Herringbone stuff with stripes and stars of tangled silk. Push-bar-stripes with shining beads and bobbins and loops of bright silk.

Long shaggy stripes of mohair, with mingling colors on camel's-hair. But—there has got to be an end of words—if we haven't seen a tenth we may as well stop here today.
