THE COLUMBIAN AND DEMOCRAT. BLOOMSBURG, COLUMBIA COUNTY, PA.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL. The Biggest Things.

(FOR THE COLUMBIAN.) Banmtown

BY JOHN SUTTON.

Far up the creek, where mountains lift their lofty heads toward the clouds and many a gushing spring sends its contribution to the main stream is Baumtown a town with a name but no habitation. We have often heard of the man who could not see the town tor houses, but here things are reverse. we cannot see the houses for the town or more correctly speaking, we cannot see the town for the want of houses. But there it is, and is as definitely located as is Stillwater or Benton, and any person in the neighborhood can point it out to you. Why it is called Baumtown belongs to an earlier page nab. of the history of upper Fishingoreek, and for the benefit of the younger readers of the COLUMBIAN I will endeavor to transcribe it.

Between 45 and 50 years ago, a man could be often seen traveling up and net register. down the creek road, carrying on his shoulder an odd looking leathern sack. He was rather short of stature, but compactly built, and moved upon his a rocky peninsula jutting out into the feet with a firm tread. His beard was thick and flowing, and his uncut hair parted in the middle of his forehead in true Nazareen style, hung in ringlets above the sea level. Its northern face about his shoulders, his complexion is almost perpendicular, while its east was dark, but his eye was bright, and ide is full of tremendous precipices. his countenance, though serious, was On the south it terminates in what is pleasant. He came from one of the alled Europa Point. The west side is lower counties, built a cabin, erected a ess steep than the east, and between sawmill and for several years engaged ts base and the sea is the narrow, a in the manufacture of lumber on the spot now dedicated to his memory. that In cases of extremest need The will is taken for the deed.

There was another thing, that, per haps, had something to do in bringing old gentlemen into this section where he thought he could make some money. He was strongly impressed with the duty of going as a missionary to the "Flathead Indians." In private conversation on the subject he became quite excited over the thought of how much good he could do among them, and would start on his mission as soon as he could raise the neccessary means. But alas ! for human calcula tions he found like others before him and since, that lumbering in the mountains and hanling the products so far to market was not a paying business, that when the expenses were paid there was nothing left, if they, even came out square. So he disposed of his property and returned to where he came from, and has long since passed away like all things earthy. His cabin and his mill, too, are gone, not a vestage of being left to show that here brains had been active planning, hands had been busy toiling, and a warm heart had looked forward with pleasing anticipations to the accomplishment of an object but had failed, we believe never went on his mission to the "Flatheads" perhaps he found them nearer home, but he left behind him, what many a man who made a much greater stir in the world has failed to do, an honest name.

The Real Independents.

Tom Marshall, "glorious old Tom," the Republican war-horse of Allegheny county, says :

"An important demand of the times is for a courageous, earnest enforce-ment of the laws of the State, statutory and organic, especially affecting cor porations. These live questions cannot be throttled by yelling tariff, either in Maine or Pennsylvania. The Governor of the State has only one voteand it does not depend on official prerogative and has no significance on the tariff more than that of a tramp.

"The everlasting bugaboo of allow ing the Democrats to elect the Governor ought not to frighten grown-up Will the warmest and most people enthusiastic friend of General Beaver venture to claim that he is more honest, more wise or better mentally equipped for the intelligent discharge of the high daties of statesmanship incident to Gubernatorial station than Mr. Black ? In many respects Mr. Black is greatly the superior. He has a far wider knowledge of public affairs, his mental gifts are more ripe and thorough, and I firmly believe he is no man's man. "The only reason suggested why the Independents should step into machine harness and vote their own condemna-tion is the danger of electing a Democratic Governor. The independents assumed that risk once before and I am free to say that the result has more than sustained the wisdom of the choice. A Domecrat was elected and the State still lives.

"The administration of Governor Pattison has been wise, pure and honorable. No personal scandals have arisen ; no departure from an honest, careful and watchful guardianship of the interests of the State can be shown. The Commonwealth will be fortunate in securing an Executive as clear and free from private or public reproach as Robert E. Pattison."
