The outrage and murder of women in country places who venture abroad unat ended after dark is becoming an alarming ly frequent occurrence in this country The murder of Mrs. Catharine Tas well near Bryn Mawr, when on her way home from church Sunday evening, brings this crime pretty close to Philadelphia. The dangerous tramps who infest and terrorize the suburbs have made country roads extra hazardous for women who venture on them without male escort after the day has begun to fade. As long as such ruflians are at large and the necessity of policing country roads is not recognized, the only safe course for women in suburban dis tricts is not to venture abroad after nightfall unprotected.—Phila. The WilkesBarre & Western R. R.

A recent issue of the Milton Army save a trip along the route of the Wilkes-Barre & Western Railway evinces the fact that the construction of this important line of railroad is progressing in a very commendable and satisfactory manner. The grading of the first twenty-one miles of the road, between Watsontown and Millville, is nearly completed. The heavy cut at Jerseytown, which is a half mile long and fifty feet deep, through solid rock, and one hundred and fifty feet of which is being tunneled, will be finished in about ten days. The road will be opened for business between Watsontown and Millville in December next, and the local traffic will on this portion of the line alone pay handsome returns upon the cost of construction. Considering the fact that the company is building a first-class road, using only the best materials, putting down heavy sixty-three pound steel rails, with stone ballast, the rapid progress made by the originators and promoters of the enterprise is not only commendable, but very creditable indeed. Knowing them all personally for many years we felt assured from the inception of the enterprise that it could not have fallen into better hands, as all are men of undau sted energy and practical ability."
