In Sunbury his gnostship is a man having a cloak or gossamer thrown about him and with s nalf mask on his face, when he meets any one he asks them if they have a scar on the top of their head. What he will do when he finds the party who says they have s scar no one can tell. In Milton it appears d ressed as a woman and has frightened a great many people. Two ghosts in one county is a surplus, especially as they are n neighboring places. Since they appear to be male and female, it would be well to transport one or the other. Perhaps they are seeking each other. Now is the time to get out the trade dol. lars, shake the dust off and take them down to the banks. Letter to Senator Metzgar.

BLOOMSBURG, TUESDAY, March 8, 1887.

HON VERUS H. METZGAR, HARRISBURG. DEAR SIE:-By a bill in the lower house, it is proposed to cast upon litigants the burden of maintaining one of the officers of our courts, the stenographer. It might as sensibly be proposed to revert to the old practice of requiring parties to pay the exenses of the jury, or even to ask them to theory of our system of government is that the people bear the load for their mutual benefit. While the line has not been sharply drawn in all matters, it has become the accepted practice that the general machinery of the administration of justice is a public charge; and I see no eason for excepting the stenographer more than the jury or the judge or, if you please, the clerk of the court or the prothonotary or any officer of the county, as, for example the county commissioner or the commis sioners' clerk, who, though not directly concerned with the interpretation and the enforcement of the law, is yet an administrative officer charged with duties that relate to the community. The notion that quarrel the state has no concern, and who ought to furnish their own wespons and material of war, is a notion that non-business men in the country are apt to imbibe from public spirited and zealous guardians of the county treasury; but it is somewhat antiquated and open to the suspicion of being illfounded. An enlightened commonwealth, such as ours is supposed to be, does not regard every honest difference between citizens as a groundless variance that they ought to settle at their own ex- turn gray or wear shiny; satin pense without the invocation of the courts, or upon the courts as a substitute for the trial by ordeal or wager of battle. Effency of Vaccination. LOCAL NOTICES.

The folly of the French Canadians of Montreal in resisting vaccination a year ago when the small pox broke out in that city, has been strikingly demonstrated by the report of Dr. Louis Laverge, the health officer. The proportion of deaths that year among Catholics other than French was 29 60 per 1,000 among Protestants year among Catholics other than French was 29 60 per 1,000, among Protestants 20 05 per 1,000, among the French Canadians 64 72 per 1,000; this great excess of mortality, says Dr. Laverge, being mainly due to the neglect of vaccination or opposition to it among the latter class of people. A still more striking illustration is given by the Rev. Abbe Decaris. In the municipality of St. Henri, near Montreal, the number of small pox cases was 233. Of this number there were 115 who refused to be vaccinatee. The whole 115 died, while of the remaining 118 who had been vaccinated not one died.
