Randall on the Work of Congress.

At a banquet given by the Americus Club of Philadelphia last week Thurs-day, Samuel J. Randall responded to the toast. "The Congress of the United States." Among other things

I suppose I may be allowed to speak more particularly of the Congress of the United States which has just ex pired—a Congress which has had the sdvantage of a Democratic Executive. We have not—I speak as one of the members—we have not been spared much by the press, and yet, while many things have been done which I do not like and other things have not been done which I should have liked to have seen done, yet I think, upon the whole when it is fairly stated, that the Congress which has just closed is not entitled to that measure of criticism which has been given to it.

The Congress curbed the grasping spirit of corporate monopoly and it re-turned to the public domain millions of acres of land unearned by the railroad companies, known as land grants, and may be permitted to recite a few of its enactments, which it seems to me recommend it to public favor. It passed the act providing for the per-formance of the duties of the president and vice-president whenever by reason of removal by death or other cause there should be a vacancy in the presidental and vice presidential office. And it is fixed that the succession should attach to that party which bad at the previous election commended itself to the people by the selection of those two es, so that now if a great calamity should come upon the American people from any cause in the vacancy of the office of president or vice-president the party which chose them would have the secretary of state to take the place, whose views would be in har-mony with those of the officers whose ons were made vacant.

Again this Congress provided that there should never again be a contro versary over an electoral count. It determined that the states should decide who the proper electors are and that the advice of Congress should be mere-ly ministerial, and it has struck from statute book the Tenure of Office bill, which was enseted to prevent Andrew Johnson from making appointments to office. It was unconstitutional, in my judgment, when it was passed and we can congratulate ourselves that the power of the President in connect-ion with the removal from office is now absolute and without the least restrict-

We have, as I said, placed in the public domain open to homesteads, millions of acres of land. We declared forfeited the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad grants; we declared forfeited the Baton Rouge and Vicksburg; we de-clared forfeited all unearned lands ac-

WHAT IT HAS DONE FOR LABOR

Nor has labor been forgotten. We have my friends—you will pardon me if I refer with some particularity—we have passed an act to prohibit the hiring and contracting of labor of the United States prisoners. We have passed an act to prohibit the importation and emigration of foreigners and aliena under contract or agreement. We have passed an act to permit the incorporation of national trades unions, permitting labor to organize, as it has right to organize, in its self-defense and in favor of its own bet'erment. And we have my friends, passed an act to make inquiry as to the condition of the finances of all Pacific roads and all roads which have received grants of land from the United States. What has been its effect ! We find that one of the principal roads has already determined to make provision for the annual payment of the interest on those bonds due to the United States. and provides a way for the ultimate liquidation of the principal of that

These are some of the things we have done. We have, my friends, provided for bringing suits in the United States in a court of inquiry, so that every claim that is just against the United States may go to the judicial tribunal to determine the facts instead of going into the halls of Congress and engaging lobbyists there to see that they are passed. We have, moreover, passed an act to authorize the President of the United States to protect and defend the rights of American fishing and other vessels, trading with Canada and other countries, and my friend here, the Alderman, will, I am sure, appreciate the act to which I am now about to refer-we have passed an act pensioning the Mexican heroes and we passed an act increasing the pensions of one-armed and oneed soldiers and sailors.

We passed an act to provide for the redemption of trade dollars upon the right to issue any coin or anything in the semblance of money which that government was not willing to take back at its face value. [Cheers.] And is not the turnpike located on, or near next, my friends, we passed an act known as the Interstate Commerce act, ing from Hubbersville to Arch Bridge bring about a better arrangement in the transportation of the products of the United States. We may have to alter transportation of the products of the United States. We may have to alter that act, but we will not do it until experience has shown wherein it must be changed, and I am glad to say that so far as I know the railroad companies of the United States have in every direction agreed and determined to give

WHAT HE CLAIMS FOR HIS PARTY. And now, my friends, I want to say how our opponents four years ago said that the Democratic party should not be trusted with the administration of a Federal Government. How delightfully and how beautifully to us has that apprehension disappeared.

The Democratic Executive and the Democratic House, largely with the cooperation of the Senate, I am free to admit, have impressed upon the statute books of this country remedial and corrective legislation which I do not last Sunday night, aged 77 years.

believe has ever in the who history of the American Government been put upon the statute book at a single term of congressional life The public credit is as strong or stronger to-day than it ever has been, and labor has been permitted to be strengthened in its demands for a more liberal share in the profits of production.

And why should not labor have the same right to organize for its self protection as capital. There should be, in my judgment, no conflict between those two interests, but they should go hand in hand, as the right hand of man helps the left and the left helps the right. No; we are to-day witness ing a prosperity throughout the United States that is beyond parallel, and far beyond the most exaggerated expectations of the most sanguine men. Nor is this a boom my friends. It is a healthy business revival, and it is go-ing to stay, in my opinion, so that in all our future struggles with the Re-publican party it will not do for them to express to an indulgent people ary apprehension as to the ability of the Democratic party to administer this Government with honesty and bring about the reforms which we promised

Fire at New Columbus

The peaceful slumbers of our villag ers were suddenly disturbed, about 4 o'clock on the 30th ultimo, by the dread cry of "fire." It was found to be emanating from the west front of the Koons Hotel. The property was re-cently sold by the heirs of the estate to W. L. Stevens, of this place. The terrible uncertainties of an earthquake are scarcely more dreadful than the wild cry of "fire" in the darkness of night and when the dames are fanned by the March winds of this altitude the terror is doubly intensified. The paintul reflection that our half-dressed. panic-stricken neighbors must improvise and constitute the only fire de partment attainable, is by no means reassuring. Mrs. D. L. Chapin was first to discover the fire, from her bedroom opposite, and her husband was first to give the alarm. It was the prompt action of D L Chapin, Charles Marsch and J. B. Rainard that may be said to have rescued from destruction, not only the hotel, but also such other buildings as the flames might easily have reached. A few moments delay on this occasion would, in our opinion, have resulted in the destruction of the principal buildings of the town. Happily, no serious damage was done to the occupants or to the building. This building has narrowly escaped the ravages of fire on several previous occesions; but hitherto the origin was purely accidental, and, therefore, easily d-termined and excused Examination on the part of landlord Coleman has conclusive evidence that this was the the hellish work of an incendiary bent upon gain or villiany. Old newspapers saturated with coal oil were drawn from between the weather-boards and plastering and, therefore, the evidence of incendiarism may be both seen and smelled. Murder will out, and so we trust may this black villany sooner or later. For lighter reading the comical featnres of this serious oceasion may be worthy of mention. For instance, D. L. Chapin found his pants had got tangled in the excitement, and he couldn't get them on, so he ran out by the cry, slipped out of bed and into his gum boots. H: was about to join the fire department when his wife reminded him that he would look better with pants on. His modesty compelled him to stop long enough to comply Landlord Coleman not only heard the wild alarm, but he smelled the smoke uncomfortably near, and he determined to act with the demoralized depart ment instanter. His first effort was to get a light to see the fire, and after repeated unsuccessful attempts, he succeeded through his wife's assistance He grabbed a pail of water and with his heart in his mounth, he started for the west front on a slippery path, and coming upon the scene of the remorseless flame, he took an awkward plunge and received the cool contents of his backet. But other members of the department were more successful in getting water to the spot, and hence serious damage and much deviltry was Yours, &c. L. J. J.

East Benton.

Our item, copied by last week's Echo, under the title, "A Little Plain Talk," is very significant. If therein is a single untruth stated, or anything to mislead, or to prejudice the public, why not so state the fact? But, if the simple truth was told, why such a squirming? Said the Echo, "This effort of the correspondent to befoul his nest' needs condemnation." Why? Because in the far greater enterprise than the turnpike, viz; the W. & W. railroad, a hundred fold more benefic ial to our community, as a whole. Shickshinny is making every effort to divert that enterprise at the Arch Bridge via Nob Mountain and Jones town in the hope thereby to hold their grip on the turnpike toll and the community's traffic. Without malice, we repeat that the "W. & W. railroad via Cambria will settle the turnpike toll." The tumpike has served its day and generation and ought to go. "With principle that no government had any Bridge and Suckshinny the people the exception of the mile between Arch coming to Shickshinny have the same roads they have always had and can alternative but to travel the turnpike without great inconvenience as to distance when going and returning to and from Shickshinny? This is purely a matter between individual selfish and public interest, why the threat, "the correspondent should beware?"

Shickshinny has prospered and grown rich and its principal source of wealth has been derived from the great say it with great respect to any who may differ with me in politics, for I believe that all parties are of a lieve that all lieve that all parties are of pure motive ages not enjoyed by any other town in and honest purpose, and, therefore, if our knowledge. The effort to secure there be such here at this moment of for ourselves these, or like advantages our celebration, I am quite sure that and divert the trade from that town they will pardon a little exhortation. makes the Echo wriggle—hence its You and I, Mr. President, remember last paragraph, including its threat. last paragraph, including its threat.

THE YOHE MURDER-THE ASSASSINS NOT YET DISCOV-ERED.

THE STORY OF THE CRIME REVIVED BY SENSATIONAL REPORTS.

In a number of the daily papers last week Thursday the following dispatch der and highway robbery, committed here on the 27th of May, 1870, is cleared up by a confession made by one of the perpetrators of the crime. On the date named a young man named Jefferson Yohe, a resident of Mifflin, Columbia county left this place for home, with his team and the proceeds of the sale of a ton of hay. About an oevertheless. hour after leaving the town he was found lying in the road on the top of the mountain, about a mile and a half distant, with a bullet wound in his has been in the employ of Seybert since up to the time of his death and dethe afternoon of the day of the murder Michael Hartzel and Charles Frederick, both of Columbia county were seen in town. They acted suspiciously. They left town the following morning as far as Ringtown. After their deon merchants and saloon keepers here.

Two weeks later they were arrested, harged with the murder and robbery and with passing counterfeit money. A month after they were discharged Both men have since served terms of mprisonment in the penitentiary for counterfeiting, and on Sunday last Frederick died at his home near Mifflin. Before his death he made a confession n which he declares that he and Hart zel committed the crime. The latter he said, obtained information that young Yohe was to have several hun-dred dollars with him on his return from Shenandoah and he induced him to come here and assist him in the murder and robbery. Hartzel, he says, mounted the wagon and did the shoot-ing and he went through the mardered man's pockets and obtained seventeen dollars in cash. Hartzel has been ar-rested and is held in Columbia county to await the arrival of the officers from this county, where the murder was perpetrated."

The publication of this article caused considerable excitement here, and the almost forgotten murder was talked of House Board has completed arrange-The publication of this article caused in every public place and on every ment for increasing and improving its street corner. ion of the case the past week, we are, through the courtesy of Col. Freeze ena ded to present to our readers a very full and correct abstract of the pro- to navigation, as a light of much less seedings at the time it occurred. After the murder Michael Hartzel.

Isaac Keen and Charles Frederick were arrested charged with the offense; and were brought before David Davis, Esq. a Justice of the Peace at Ringtown, Schuylkill county, on the 30th day of Charles R. Buckalew and John G.

Freeze Esqs., appeared for the Com-nonwealth, and E. H. Little and C. W. Miller Esqs., for the defendants Twenty-five witnesses were called by the Commonwealth and about ten for the defendants. Col. Freeze's notes of the case as it then stood. While the hearing was in progress Frederick got off from the officers and ran away; and Hartzel was, he believes, bound over for passing counterfeit movement.

On Thursday 26 May, 1870, Jefferson F. P. Yohe left his nome in Mif-flin, with a team consisting of a black horse and roan mare, with load of hay to go over the mountains to Shenan-doah. Arrived in Shenandoah same evening and stopped at Shultz's tav-ern. Left Shenandoah Friday fore noon for home, and passed some men working on the road shortly before 12 o'clock M., alone on his wagon. About one mile from Shenandoah, on home road was shot by a man who had just before got on the wagon to ride with him, and just then, a second man came out of the woods who rifled his pockets, and both men left. Soon after, he was found lying in the road and the team by the side of it. He was taker back to the village to the house of Geo. A. Herring where he died on Tuesday, May 31, and was buried

The evidence at that time was no considered sufficient to hold the de-fendants on, and so far as is known no new evidence has yet been discovered, but "murder will out," and some day the perpetrators of this cowardly mur der will be unearthed.

Blaine's Presentiment-

A recent dispatch from New York

"Those who were nearest to James G. Blaine in the canvass of 1884, and who had his entire confidence, can bear evidence that there never was a day or hour, from his nomination at Chicago, in June, 1884, until the end of the campaign, on the first Tuesday of November, that Mr. Blaine did not believe he would be defeated."

If the above be true, Mr. Blaine go bravely over his presentiment immediately after the first Tuesday of November. The country remembers only too well how frantically he clung to the de lusion that he was elected, and how he urged his friends to hold New York for him at all hazards, and how he and his friends claimed everything, under his advice, for days and even weeks after his defeat had become certain.

As Mr. Blaine is subject to presenti-ments we would suggest to him that there is food for thought for him in the possibilities of 1888. A presentiment that John Sherman will defeat Rev Tubbs was home on a visit.

Mr. Ross Baker, near Cambra, died land will defeat him in the election, as Sunday night, aged 77 years.
