Printing of Government Money. CONCLUSIONS OF A COMMITTEE WHICH HAS INVESTIGATED THE SUBJECT.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Chairman Wheeler, of the House Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department, to-day received from the Public Printer the first copies of the report on the bill. "To provide for printing the Government securities in the highest style of the art." The bill is intended to do away with the use of power presses in printing notes and bonds, substituting therefor the hand press, upon which it is claimed better work can be done.

"In the earlier stages of their investigation," says the report, the commit-tee were waited on by the Legislative Committee of the Knights of Labor, by whom it was urged that the plate printers of the country were vitaly in-terested in the decision which the com-mittee might reach, both as citizens who were hable to be imposed upon and subjected to loss if the obligations of the Government of the Government were so poorly printed as to facilitate, if not to invite ounterfeiting, and as handicraftsmen interested in vindicating their claims that the intelligence, training and skill of their brethren could not be equalled by machinery."

The committee also found that at its last regular session the New York Legislature adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That all Government securities, such as bonds, notes, stamps, checks, &c., should be executed in the highest obtainable grade and perfection of the arts of engraving and printing, for the security of the Government and the people against error, fraud and counterfeiting, and that the Senators and Representatives of this State in Congress be, and they hereby are, requested to use their utmost en-deavors to secure legislation to that Saved My Child's Life.

J. S. Weaver, Secretary Iron Steam hoat Company, New York, says: I wish to say to the public that I had a child about four years of age, lying at the point of death, with summer comit, (diarrhos) the doctor and all of us having given up hope. The doctor however, advised us to get some of Speer's Port Wine, and give her a little at a time—very little, but of ten. As a last resort we did so, and I say that Speer's Port Wine saved her life. She my only child. I had never seen Mr. Speer, but with tears of joy, I went and told him that his wine had saved the life of my only child.

A Watch that Runs Without Winding. A Shamokin despatch says William the Stamets, who is the inside foreman of B. Reading Company's Big Moun-tain Colliery, has in his posse-sion a sdy's silver, stem-winding watch, of a Swiss make, which is puzzling the minds of a good many people. About three months ago it was found impos-sible to wind the watch, and, aithough several attempts have been made, no one has ever succeeded in turning the stem. Strange to say, the watch con-tinues to run regularly. Mr. Stamets, who is a man in every way worthy of belief, says that, supposing some one was tampering with the watch with-out his knowledge, he placed it under lock and key for several days, only to mystery. The Concord Monitor states it as a truthful piece of news that a young man hired a boat at Lake Village recently and on returning it found a pocketbook containing $500. He promptly returned it to the owner—the man he engaged the boat of—who charged him $1 for the use of the boat and thanked him for finding the pocketbook. Judging from the course the transaction, it is fortunate that the young man did not find $1,000, or he might have had to pay $2 for the use of the boat.—Boston Commercial

SUFFERING WOMEN SINGLE FEMALE REGULATING PILLS. Are We the "Pittest?"

If the Chinese capture California—something they will certainly do, should we destroy our defenses by a vote for Harrison—it will not take them long to capture the rest of the country. We are very self-conceited. We are quite sure that in the struggle of life we are the fittest, and shall therefore survive. We have no doubt at all that the laws of nature will be suspended in our case. So we forgot that we have conquered this country from the Indians because one white man can live where ten Indians starve, because where a whi e man needs an acre to keep him an Indian cannot get along with ten. We are full of confidence because the fact that ten Chinamen can live where one white man would starve, that an American needs ten acres to keep him while a Chinamen can get along with one, har not yet impressed us. The "fittest" are those who can best adapt themselves to their surroundings. The fittest persons to live and thrive and grow fat and rich and enjoy themselves in the fetid and crowded dens of Chinatown are the Chinese; so they dwell there. We could not. We want a great deal the Chinese can get along very well without. Hence, if ever they come unchecked, or practically unchecked into this country, they will drive the American to the wall, just as the American has driven the Indian. There are enough of them to do it, too, There are enough of them to do it, too, and with reproduction unchecked, as in China, by the impossibility of supporting a family, the race would increase here with enormous rapidity. So far from being "settled," the Chinese question is endowed at present with a more dangerous vitality than ever. Let California haul down its anti-Chinese flag by voting for Harrison and the yellow host will swarm over our walls. our walls.

Dyspepsia.

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. We know of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsapa rilla. What He Wanted.

"I want to make a report that my wife has run away," sail a tired look-ing man to Lieutenant Amiss at Twelfth Street station. "Very well," replied the Lieutenant, politely; "when did it happen?" "When did what happen?" asked the man with a sigh. "When did your wife run away?" repeated the Lieutenant kindly. "She hasn't run away," said the man sitting down. "What did you say so for?" asked the Lieutenant getting hot in the collar. "I didn't say so," replied the man. "Yes you did," said the Lieutenant. "No I didn't. I said I wanted to report that she had run away but confound her, she won't give me a chance. Can't a man express a wish in this office without being insulted?" Then the man grinned at his joke in time to get a tip from the Lieutenant instead of a bounce into the street, and he went away and moistened the inner coating of his stamsch with ten cents

"Here is the queerest case of swindling I ever heard of," said a gentle-men, as he laid down a copy of an English newspaper "It shows that the British are as sharp sometimes as the Yankees. A young man, wearing a most melancholy countenance and all the habiliments of woe went to a prominent undertaker, and stating his uncle (naming a wealthy citizen) was dead, ordered a very expensive coffin with silver mounting to be sent to the residence of the deceased. In payment he tendered a check considerably larger than the price of the coffin and received the change in hard sovereigns. The sorrowful young man then disappeared, and when the coffin was sent accordingly to the address the prominent citizen supposed to be deceased was found alive and well. The slick swindler played his little game on a number of the leading un-dertakers of London, and then worked the same racket in Dublin without being caught. So you see Johnny Bull can give us some pointers on swindling yet."—Louisville (Ky.)

It is an absolute fact that there is not an ounce of Pond's Extract sold which is not put up in their own bot-tles by Pond's Extract Co. It cannot be bought except in the Company' bottles. No druggist can make it. No druggist can "put it up" for you. The only way to get the real Pond's Ex-tract is to buy a bottle with the Company's strip over the cork, their name blown in the glass, and their landscape trade mark on the buff wrapper. Any druggist who would deceive you about this by selling you a cheap spurious imitation as Pond's Extract, saying that he "buys it by the parrel and puts it in bottles himself," is not a safe man to sell medicine or anything else.
