GROEGE A. CLARK, P. M. The occupants of the houses at Locust Gap wrecked by the explosion last spring have brought suit against the P. & R. Railroad Co. to recover damages. The houses were the property of the Coal and Iron company, which is virtually the same as the railroad corporation. The plaintiffs claim damages in the neighborhood of $100,000. Under the law the Railroad Co.

is required to show that it did not in any way through its negligence contribute to the accident, which caused the fatalities at Locust Gap.

nobility of work. Mr. Ikeler's early years were spent in working upon the farm and attending at the public schools of the neighborhood. At the age of sixteen he became a student at the Greenwood Seminary, which at that time enjoyed the reputation of being one of the leading schools in this section. Subsequently he learned the miller's trade, and upon completing his apprenticeship he purchased an interest in the mill and continued in that business up until 1865, a period of ten years. This business was engaged in when very profitable, and was prosperous. During the time that he was in the milling business he purchased a good miscellaneous library, and continued reading and improving himself for future usefulness. Through the advice of his old instructor, Mr. Burgess, a prominent teacher in the schools, and by the persuasion of friends, he determined to sell the mill and commence the study of the law. In 1865 he moved to Bloomsburg and entered the office of Col. John G. Freeze as a law student, and in regular course was admitted to the bar. His ability as a lawyer was carly recognized and his rise at the bar was rapid. Raised from among the people. and of the people, he enters into the sympathies and feelings that guide the masses.
