JUDGE ELWELL.

At a meeting of the members of the Bar of Columbia and Montour counties held in loomsburg on August 2. a committee was appointed to determine upon some appropriate action in recognition of the retirement of Hon. William Elwell from the Bench of this district. The committee decided to tender Judge Eiwell a banquet, and invitations were sent out to the Judges of other districts who had presided here he has presided, and to the members of the legal profession of other districts who have practiced before him. I began practice as the chairman has stated at an early day in the northern counties of the commonwealth. The country Wilkesbarre, and the menu was as follows: was comparatively new. The facilities for travel by public conveyances were of the most meagre kind. Elliptic springs to carringes were not invented. The judge and members of the bar usually traveled on horseback. I frequently rode in that way fifty miles in a day in order to reach a county seat in the western part of the district. The accommodations then were of the most primitive character. The court was convened by the sound of the dinner horn blown by the crier. The small room was warmed by a wood stove and the work at evening was done by the light of tallow candles. But there were shining lights at form. the bar in the northern counties at that time, Ellis Lewis subsequently chief justice of the state, Anson V. Parsons, R. G. White, John W. Maynard and Horace Williston, my preceptor whose name I always pention with reverence, all subsequently judges of eminence, were among the forethen Col. Freeze rapped for order and ad-

most at the bar at that day. The difficulties which we at that tim labored under for want of better facilities for travel I cannot better illustrate than by Montour counties I most cordially welcome staring an experience of my own. In 1832 a sheriff sale took place in Tloga county The brotherhood of the Bar has been on a writ issued from the district court of proverieal throughout its whole history, Yerk county. The sale was alleged to past. No Judge that has retired from the hotel in Bloomsburg I saw there engaged in an arbitration men whom I did not then know, but who afterward I found to be Robert C. Grier, afterward a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Le Grand Bancroft and others. I reached the borough of York on Monday morning the fourth day after I started and reached the court house just in time to hear the crier announce that the sheriff of Tioga county was about to acknowledge a deed. The proceedings were stopped and the sale was subsequently set aside. Now instead of a long, burried and tedious journey the lawyer of to-day would first by telegram and then by mail transact the business that I was sent to accomplish without leaving his

Improvements in constitutions and laws and in the practice of the law have kept pace with improvements in the material world. Chancery jurisdiction has been conferred upon the courts of the commonwealth. The common law in many mat ters has been changed by statute. Technicalities in respect to form of action and pleading are almost entirely abrogated by the Wolverton bill. The rights, powers, and liabilities of married persons are now defined by statute instead of by common law. Lord Coke said of himself that if asked a question in regard to the common law he would be ashamed not to be able to answer it at once, but if asked a question in regard to a matter regulated by statute, he would be ashamed to give an answer without the statute before him. To this I would add that in these days of much legislation it would be prudent when considerdefined by statute instead of by common lation it would be prudent when considering questions dependent of the common law to consult the statute book also in or- If you prize exclusiveness, a change. In the practice in courts great changes have been made to facilitate the despatch of business. Formerly it was the practice as Advocates at the Bar, they have the in the Supreme court to take books cited into the court and in oral arguments read them. I remember one occasion when a able, seasonable stuffs at 75c! lawyer was reading a lengthy report containing only some commonplace principle, when he was interrupted by Chief Justice Mr. Justice Sargeant said: "The Advo. Gibson saying "You need not read that to cate has his share of influence in every us, you ought to take it for granted that government where property and rights are this court knows something." It was after that when the present rule was adopted which in effect forbids the former practice. I wish you all success in your profession, may you be bles with health and all things that combine to make life happy and enjoyable.

Col. Freeze then announced as the next oast, "The Judiciary," and called upon Judge Pershing to respond, which he did most appropriately. The next toast was "The Bar," and was responded to by Mr. Gowen in an eloquent address. State" was responded to by Gov. Davies, who said that one of the rules of an after dinner speech was that the speaker was permitted to talk about everything except the subject assigned him, and that both of the gentlemen who preceded him had violated this rule. He then paid a beautiful tribute to Judge Elwell, with whom he studied law, and whom he had known for many years.

This was the end of the regular toasts In response to calls all the other Judge present, Messrs. Palmer, Payne, Kaerche Munson, Overton and Mercur responded, all of whom spoke in the highest terms of the retiring Judge. Mr. Mercur concluded by alluding to the early morning hour to which the festivities had already continued and thought it was time to adjourn, and he proposed that the company arise and drink the health of their distinguished guest. This was done as the hands, of the old clock on the wall indicated the hour of three o'clock in the morning, and then the dining hall was deserted, and after a half hour's pleasant converse in the parlor, the company dispersed and retired to their homes and rooms, hoping to snatch a few moments' slumber before the sun appeared n the eastern horizon.

The committee having this matter charge were Messrs. Miller, Weller, Maize Zarr, Scarlet, West and Baldy, and as the affair was a grand success in every way, it is owing to the excellent management of those members of the committee who were active in the matter and brought it to so satisfactory a conclusion.
