SELECT STORY.

DICK JOHNSON'S VENGEANCE.

They were the most contented family in the world. The father was by turns a prospector, a trapper, or a rancher, but he never succeeded in making a good living in any way.

Dick Johnson was the kindest of men to his friends and family, yet he had his record. He would be lynched promptly if he should ever return to Montana; he had shot a bridgekeeper who demanded the toll of a half-dozen men, the death of a half-dozen more were caused by the well known fact that "Old Dick was mighty lively with his pistols when he got 'nuff whiskey aboard."

His wife did not always have a good fit dress to wear to town, the children were seldom supplied with shoes, but she always seemed contented and lazily happy, and there was not a merrier set of little ones. The mother was a fair-haired, blue-eyed woman, and the children all looked like her.

"You kin jest bet I do, and I'm mighty glad I haven't no tow-head like these here young 'uns," Caddie would answer. She was a remarkably handsome girl, and people who admired her delicate, dark face, were always shocked when her coarse voice and language were heard.

Principles Will Always Live. AN ADDRESS TO THE DEMOCRATIC SOCIETY OF PENNSYLVANIA. The following address to the democratic societies has been issued by President Black:

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—The democratic party has met temporary defeat in defense of a just, equitable and necessary principle of free government. It contended that unnecessary taxation was unjust taxation; that the federal government had no right to take more money from the people than might be necessary for its own expenses, economically administered; and that it had no right to take money from the masses of men to confer it, as a mere largesse, upon a class.

Principles Must Live. The conflict between these two principles of government is most assuredly irrepressible. It must continue until the industrial people of the United States are all free or all slaves. The democratic party has no thought of abandoning the fight. On the contrary, it has just begun it.

Close Up the Broken Ranks. We commend to the democratic people of Pennsylvania the declaration of our noble leader, President Cleveland, that the propagation of our party and its immortal principles, the democratic societies, are the most efficient agencies ever devised.

Awful Disaster at Pittsburg, Kansas. OVER ONE HUNDRED MEN KILLED. PITTSBURG, Kansas, November 10.—A disaster of the awful kind in shaft No. 2 of the Pittsburg and Cheeque or Santa Fe Mining Company, near this place last night, are just coming in. The company had more orders than they could fill and in their attempt to keep up have been running an unusually large force of miners. Yesterday morning 164 men were lowered into the mine.

Organization of Societies. There are now about 4,000 democratic clubs and democratic societies in the United States. The convention which brought these together and formed the national association, was held only on the Fourth of July last, and the democratic society of Pennsylvania was formed but a few weeks previous.

Down to the Rescue. There was plenty of help at hand and those at the top devoted their attention to rescuing their entombed companions. The fan house, only slightly damaged, was first repaired, canvas being tacked over the holes that had been closed.

Ninety Bodies Found. At 4 in the morning five had been rescued, and at 1 p. m. four more were brought out alive. At this time they struck an entry containing twelve more dead, and at 2 this afternoon ninety dead and nine wounded have been found, with twenty-five missing who are supposed to be dead. A large number of the killed are French and Italian miners.

About twenty years ago the British Government discovered that a bright, intelligent Irish lad who had joined the Eighth Hussars was endeavoring to make certain members of the regiment disloyal to the Queen. Indeed, he had succeeded so far as to induce several of the Hussars to throw off their allegiance to the crown and swear fealty to the cause of Ireland, with the explicit understanding that they would fight for Irish independence as soon as the time was ripe to strike the blow.

The English authorities did not appreciate his efforts, however, because they were not employed in the interests of "the mother country," and he was tried for treason and sentenced to death. His extreme youth, his talents, and his noble qualities all pleaded against his execution, and so, after a long time, the death sentence was commuted to banishment; that twenty years in the wilds of Australia. In those days such a sentence was regarded as worse than death, and when the young soldier went away there were heavy hearts among his friends and admirers in England and Ireland, for they thought they would never see him again.

News Items. In riding through the country one is surprised at the manner in which farmers leave their valuable machinery in the field without any protection from the rain and the sun. A shed of roughboards costs but little, and will pay a large interest on the little investment, if used to shelter these machines. Because the farmer does not see the slow decay, he is apt to forget that it is going on. He is reminded of it by some costly machine which goes to pieces just at the time when most needed. This treatment of machinery is excellent for the manufacturer, but it is one of the prominent reasons why "arming don't pay."

As the graining has now opened in earnest, sportsmen will do well to thoroughly post themselves in regard to the law of trespass in order to avoid trouble with the farming community upon whose lands they may enter in quest of game. There are several cases covering different violations of the law of trespass. Malicious trespass—a fine $100, and imprisonment not exceeding six months. Willfully carrying off or destroying any property—a fine not exceeding $50, and an imprisonment not exceeding sixty days. Unlawful destruction of property, trampling down grass, grain, etc.—a fine from $5 to $100, one-half to the informer, the other to the owner.

The post office department is soon to have a new style of postal cards. It is much like the double card of the present pattern. The back folds are split diagonally and open like a pointed card. The four corners are joined in the center, when the card is ready for mailing, with a piece of gummed paper. The card weighs less than half an ounce, and will contain more writing than the present card, the only advantage being greater privacy.

You'd be surprised, says a New York safe manufacturer, "at the number of sham paste-board safes in New York, and they're made so well that any ordinary person would be deceived. They have a business like appearance and give an office a thrifty look, all for five or six dollars, whereas the real article would cost something like $100.

Tattooing Convicts for Identification. "The latest fad in prison management," said a prison official, "is tattooing. It is a ready means of identification and is found to become popular in prison management. My idea is to tattoo a convict every time he is imprisoned and then we'll have his record as clear as the moon at midnight. Let each penal institution adopt a different mark or monogram and the problem of identifying convicts will be solved. It is the simplest and best system yet proposed. To some persons it may seem as harsh as branding, but it isn't. Tattooing isn't painful and the marks can be put on the convict's back, arms or legs, and would not embarrass reformed convicts. Tattooing is now followed in several penal institutions abroad and I now understand that it is to be introduced in the state prison at Joliet, Ill."—Buffalo Express.

Disappointed Pow-holder; Deacon Stubbs, our church is in great danger from that defective fad; did you know it? Deacon Stubbs; Defective fad! No, wretch! Have you said anything to the sexton about it? D. P.; No; he couldn't do anything about it. I mean the minister—he don't draw well.
