Work on the New Road Williamsport.

Active operations are now under way along the line of the Williamsport and Binghampton Railroad, and nearly all the McTighe, of New York, who have the general contract, are required to have the road open for traffic between Williamsport and Towards by October 1, of this year. Preparations are now making for starting the work North of Towards. At a meeting held last week sub-contracts were let for the completion of two sections, one of twenty-eight miles, from Barbour's Mills to DuShore, and another of ten miles, from Wallace's Run to Barbour's Mills. In all. forty miles of the road are now under ompleted will be 110 miles. Hundreds of Italian laborers are flocking to the scene of operations in search of work.

Death by Coal Gas. Sunbury was thrown into a great fever of excitement on Wednesday morning, January 9, 1889, by learning that William Carns was found dead in his bed at about o'clock, while his wife lay over in a corner of the bed-room in a heap, unconscious and frothing at the mouth, and a little adopted daughter, belonging to Mrs. Carn's sister, was lying on the bed nearly dead. George H. Gibson, Drs. F. L. Haupt and G. W. Furey, J. B Reed, and Wesley Auten forced their way into the house of the deceased on Market street, after becoming alarmed at the non-appear ance of any of the occupants. When the door of the sleeping apartment was opened a flood of coal gas rushed out, and when the party got into the room they saw at a glance the work of the fatal gas. The child and Mrs. Carns were removed as quickly as possible, but the man had been dead several hours. The room was tightly closed, not a bit of ventilation or fresh at could force its way into the room. The cause of the awful work was a little stove about one and one-half feet in height, in which a few charred sticks and coals were smouldering and the lid partly opened,

The Philadelphia Record of a recent date says: Pennsylvania Railroad capital has road in the northern part of Pennsylvania and effectually blocked a Philadelphia and Reading scheme. will also secure. It is understood that the Reading has been after the road, and some time since made an offer to the stockholders which was not accepted. As well as securing the traffic naturally tributary to it, the Reading would by this means have obtained an excellent route to Niagara Falls by connection with the Lehigh Valley Road. All Colonel Henry D. Welsch, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Board of Directors; Sidney F. Taylor, President of the Fourth Street National Bank, and George Sanderson, a wealthy banker of Williamsport. The North Branch Road is now altogether dependent on the Reading, but a bridge 41.54 will be built across the Susquehanna near Hall's Station, and in this way the Philadelphia and Erie Road will be reached on the west side of the Susquehanna. The Reading has a plan by which it will partly recoup itself. A road is projected to run from Rupert, on the Catawisse branch, to Bloomsburg, connecting there with the Bloomsburg and Sullivan Railroad, which line, as well as the North Branch, is to connect with the Sullivan and State Line. The Pennsylvania Rallroad Company has a plan for bridging the Susquehanna from its North and West Branch to Bloomsburg to make the same connection, but since it has secured the Williamsport and North Branch Railroad this scheme will probably be given up. Not to be outdone by its rivals, the Lehigh Valley Railroad has determined to push its Harvey's Lake Branch, running north from Wilkesbarre to a connection with the Sullivan and State Line. It is expected that with these connections the semi-anthracite pany will find a much wider market. The region is now capable of great develop-

WANAMAKER'S.

One week ago 300 pieces. within a few days secured a branch rall-road in the northern part of Pennsylvania sortment unbroken. Seek them out if you haven't seen them. They are gems of color and weaving.

> Last year we said "Ginghams" on the 4th of January. ed a good story of them on December 28th, but we didn't. Only a mention before to-day. As the young æsthete sought for grace to live to the level of his blue china (he lived in Boston), so we wish graceful words for Ginghams. Words equal to this season's Ginghams. If they exist, we don't know where. The lively chase of the last two or three years continues. Yankee after Scotchman, and a lessening distance between, Here the goods are side by side. On the staple styles you cannot tell which is Rhode land, which is Scotland, Color equally rich and reliable, spinning almost the same. The coronation of cotton.

We don't say what's coming in Ginghams. We do say that 551 styles are on the counters to-day. The range of prices is from 20 to 60 cents. The brightest imagination could not picture the successes in patterns and colors shown by this year's Gingham's. Colors heretofore thought sacred to silk and to wool are now a great success in cotton. Difference and novelty in style are expected, but it remained for this season to bring colors to perfection. As we look at the goods to-day it seems that the limits of cotton beautiful are throat and lungs, a remedy that is selling entirely upon its merits and is guaranteed reached, the new-plus-ultra of spinning, weaving, coloring. But who knows? The Yankee Gingham maker may yet be to the Scotchman as Cutty Sark to Tam-o'-Shanter: cannot capture him body and soul, but may whisk off his horse's tail in a twinkling. Ride fast, Anderson, there's a fiend of a Yankee behind ye!

What woman is not interested in these Ginghams? The shelves and counters are full, and they are long counters. Come, feast your eyes on them Maybe you'll want to select something now, for the Whytlaws are confined to us for this market, and some styles are vanishing.

JOHN WANAMAKER.
