Expert Swindlers-

PERPOSURE OF THE ELECTRIC SUGAR COMPANY.

I recall the fact that within the pas twenty years we have had among fa-mous swindles a scheme for burning water and one for getting a new and valuable metal out of iron slag. Each one of these has victimized more people than the electric sugar business. slag iron game was played pretty much as the sugar affair. The alleged inve tor must have carried away $100, 000, mostly from poor people. The company that owned the secret of burning water sold several thousand dollars worth of stock at good prices. The "scoret" was in causing a jet of steam to mingle with a kerosene oil flame. It was a good way of burning oil that was all. The most successful swindler was Alfred Paraff, a young Freechman. who came to this country in 1870 with what he pretended was the secret for dying silk plush the black required for making bats. Paraff took rooms a seleading hotel in New York and astronished the town. He kept a cab in front of the door night and day; he used $20 worth of cologne water in haif a doz-n men for large sums. At the height of his career he married Miss Lela Smith, the daughter of Bain bridge Smith, a New York lawyer, Six months lat r the structure tumbled to the several blocks. to pieces and Paraff fled.

"It is curious," said a railroad man at the Albany station, "how firm is the attachment between a locomotive engineer and his locomotive. I know an engineer on the Central Road who calls his engine 'Hank,' and talks to it as he drives through the rain and storm just as he would to a horse, sometime in sweet and mild tones and then with the strongest imprecations upon his lips i know of another engineer who insists on sleeping in the round house near his locomotive, and thinks as much of it almost as he does of his child."

Curious Chinese Notions.

Curious Chinese Netions.

Both savage and semi-barbarous people have always exhibited a great repugnance to any surgical operation, however peocessary, which involves amputation. The North China Herald, in commenting upon this circumstance, points out that the Chinese have always shown this repugnance, not on account of fear of pain, for they are patient under all kinds of physical suffering, but because they look upon it as a duty to keep the body intact. If they submit to the amputation of a limb, they invariably ask for the severed member, and keep it in a box, to be buried in due time with the owner. Sometimes they will actually eat it, thinking it only right that that which has been taken from the body should be returned to it.

On the same principle an extracted tooth will be carefully preserved, or ground to powder and swallowed in water. Another curious phase of the same idea is seen in the belief that a sick parent can be cured by broth made from flesh cut from a living child, and it is looked upon as a sign of filial pairt for the child to submit himself to an operation for that purpose. The child is supposed to be of the vital essence of the parent, and if a portion of this essence is returned to the fountain head, the parent will be greatly strengthened. The peace loving nature of the Chinese is said to be largely due to this respect for the human body.—Chambers' Journal.

Food for Consumptives.

Snails, in the opinion of Willich, are equal in value to cysters. They are, he says, equally nourishing and wholesome. On account of their gelatinous nature they have lately been much used in consumptions; and as these complaints are now very frequent it were to be wished, says Medical Classics, that such patients would give the remedy a fair trial by boiling a dozen of the red garden snails every day in a quart of sweet milk or whey for half an hour, then straining the liquer through a coarse cloth and drinking it with sugar every morning gradually upon an empty stomach, and repeating these draughts for a month or two if required.

This red garden snail has also been used externally in the open hemorrhoids, where fresh snails were applied every two or three hours, in a raw state, with remarkable success.

The large Roman or edible snail is renowned both as a delicacy and on account of its reputed virtues as a remedy in cases of consumption, which it is said has in several instances been entirely cured by a regimen of the mucilage from these snails. On the continent the Roman snail is considered a great delicacy; but the garden and yellow banded snails are the rinds more commonly eaten.

Gentlemen—I can cheerfully and truthfully say that S, S. S. is the greatest blood purifier on earth. In 1884 I contracted blood poison. Physicians treated me with no good results. I took a half dozen different kinds of blood medicines, but, without receiving any permanent relief! I was induced to try S, S, S. I began the first-bottle with the gravest doubts of success. I had been so often deceived. But improvement came, and I continued its use until perfectly well. I have since married, and have a healthy family. No trace of the disease is seen.
