> More towns die for want of confidence on the part of business men and lack of public spirit than from any other cause. When a man in search of a home or busi ness location goes icto a town and finds everything full of hope and enthusiasm over the prospects of a place, and all carnestly at work to build it up, he soons becomes imbued with the same spirit, and as a result he drives down his stakes and goes to work with the same interest. When however, he goes to a town where everyone expresses doubt and apprehension fo the future prosperity of the place, moping about and indulging in mouraful complaints, he naturally feels that it is no place for him, and at once shakes the dust off his feet, while he pulls out with al possible speed for some other place. Phillip Appleman, the subject of this orief sketch, was born in one of the N Western townships of this county, Feb. 17 1808, and died at his home near Rohrs burg, Aug. 14, 1889, aged 81 years, 5

nonths and 28 days. His parents were Mathias and Margaret Appleman, both of whom I remember very well. His father bought a tract of land, at an early day, in what is now Benton town ship, here he removed his family and cleared a large farm. He bought a tract of land in Fishingcreek township, near Rhorsburg and at 24 years of age commenced clearing up a farm, where he lived ever since. He was one of the enterprising farmers of that day. He also ouilt a sawmili and dealt in lumber. He was for many years active in township affairs and filled many important places of trust. Fifty years ago the 26 of last May, he and his wife, were baptised by the writer, and though in the tussel of life for half a century the old gentleman did not always live consistently with the profession then made, "he kept the Faith" and died hoping for better

WM. C. LEVERETT. Harvest Services The Harvest services held in the Brian creek church on last Sunday were very interesting and impressive. In addition to the harvest sermon by the pastor and the inspiring hymns by the choir, the enterprising bodies of this congregation gave the church a fine decoration which was both novel and highly significant. It con right of the pulpit was a summer farm cene. This was a mintiture farm occupy ing a space of five feet by eight feet. The house and barn were log with a scraw roof. The land was divided into fields by a but despair. It will build up and renew stake and rail fence. In one field was standing shocks of wheat, in another corn, and in the green meadow we counted five sheep and some cattle. Along the hillside covered with buckwheat were projecting rocks. The barn with open doors was re ceiving the grain. The hired hand was driv ingin a loaded wagon. Around the door of the house were twining the vines and in front of it sat the old grandfather in the easy chair. By his side sat a little granddaughter. He was looking upon the busy scenes of the farm and thought of days gone bye and of the great Harvest day which was fast approaching him as a sheaf ready for the Heavenly Garner. On the left of the altar was a winter scene. This was also a miniature farm upon which the mantle of snow had fallen. The house was sided with bark and the roo and fields were covered with sparkling snow. The doors were closed in dicating that while there were snow and old without, within were peace, comfort and plenty, and reminding us of the lines :

"All are safely gathered in, In God's garner to abide." On the right corner of the altar platform were the symbols of agriculture put up in an artistic manner, the pitchfork, rake, flail and sickle. In front of the altar was a fine display ot the first and choices fruits of the valley, reminding one of the Old Testament times. In the rear of the pulpit were sheafs of oats, rye and wheat, and good specimens of other grain in stock, so arranged with flowers as to make a fine back ground. Even the baskets we re trimmed with wheat heads, being very suggestive of the harvest offering. In this connection it is just to say that Miss Fillie Henkelman displayed good taste and skill inspainting the pulpit sash in pleasing
