BURYING LOUISVILLE DEAD. The Number of Victims Has Not Reached One Hundred Thus Far—Digging for the Dead in the Debris—Fire Adds to the Horror—Harrowing Scenes.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 31.—If possible, the throngs of sightseers were even larger than the day previous, when the awful spectacle was first unfolded to the light of day to all its hideousness. Early trains brought hundreds of curious visitors and agents of relief from neighboring cities and towns to swell the throngs.

Funeral Hells Tolling. Meantime the tolling of church bells, the frequent passage of laden hearse and long lines of funeral carriages gave to the hurrying crowd that the torn-down victims were passing to their last resting place.

Careful estimates by competent undertakers show that the number of bodies buried thus far amounts to 125,000, with a liberal allowance for burials to be made.

Work of burying the dead went on with ghastly systematic briskness Sunday, and the work of the day before yesterday.

Carriages 810 per Hour. Humboldt lodge, J. O. F., remained at the Hill cemetery during the afternoon, and received one at a time the funeral procession of the ten members of that fraternal order.

Even with this arrangement the facilities were inadequate and the street cars, which were sent for, were not of much use.

Only a few minutes elapsed after the burst of the cyclone when the police and firemen were at work upon the ruins of the city.

Women Trampled Under Foot. Women were knocked down and trampled on in their mad haste to escape. Seeing the overwhelming numbers of the dead and mangled bodies, they were unable to do anything to help them.

Not a Single Building Standing. Not a single building was left standing in the path of the storm on Main street from Seventh to Stone street.

At 12 o'clock the opening up of a portion of the debris of Falls City had caused a draught to penetrate the ruins, where the smoldering fire broke out with tremendous force.

Several lines of loss were soon throwing water on the flames, but it was more than the fire before the work could be proceeded with, and then it was carried on with much more difficulty than before on account of the heat.

His Wife and Children were There. At about 11:30 o'clock the room where the children were sleeping was reached. Mrs. Louis Simms, of 1134 Market street, had for hours been moving about in an agony of grief.
