prosperity based upon increased tax-ation on all which enters into the daily requirements of life. Swindled of nearly all his possessions by class leg-islation in the interest of mine owners, manufacturers and transporters, he is promised no repeal of this legislation but at the last hour he is to be made an honorary member in this society of swindling knaves, by a tax upon farm products. Instead of a repeal of the tax on agricultural machinery, he is to be rewarded by a tax on eggs, butter and potatoes. Instead of a repeal of the tax on salt, binding twine, coal, lumber, wire and four thousand articles not of his producing, he is to be recompensed by an extra tax on wheat, corn and barley. This is all that is roomized the farmer, it is all that is promised the farmer: it is all that monopolists will concede because of their reliance upon the stupidity and party zeal of the great mass who com-pose the agricultural class. And is this to satisfy the farmer! Is he to be come dishonored, too, by joining the ranks of those who in their game of anap-the- whip with the tax-ridden people, will add him to the end of the line to fling him sprawling when the column rushes and turos upon the Who is it needs protecconsumers? tion? Is it the farmer? Yes; but not from other farmers; for they can work him no injury; being, like himself, in capable of monopolizing the products of the farm or the markets whereto they go. Does the farmer need pro-tection Yes; from the greed of the mine owners, the manufacturers, the transporters and the cattle kings. Can be obtain protection by a law to tax farm products, and, if so, how? Is he not told by the very men who propose to tax farm products that he has been producing too much, and that to obtain higher prices he must produce less Do not the official statistics of the treasury department show that instead of there being any foreign importations of the farm products, the American farmer is selling five hundred million dollars' worth of his product every year in Europet Can the farmer restrict production for the purpose of enhanc-ing prices? Should he plant but half the amount of seed he planted last year can he assure himself of half a crop or do the atmospheric condition, destroying insects and unknown causes over which he has no control, rightly influence him to husband every acre of his land! All history proves that the farmer dares not attempt to restrict production, unless he would blindly and foolishly court disaster. The mine owner, the manufacturer and the transporter can and do regulate much of Barn and other Outbuildings.
