MEARS FACTORY BURNED.

On Wednesday afternoon at 5.45 o'clock the prolonged blowing of a steam whistle attracted the attention of this community and it was soon learned that it came from Mears' Washer Factory on Fifth Street above Eas'. All the fire companies were quickly on hand, and had streams of water on the fire. The first line of hose laid was from Harman & Hassert's shops, by the employees, the hose belonging to the shops. The fire started in the roof of the factory soon after the hands had quit work. Some delay was caused by the breaking of two sections of hose, and further delay arose from the fact that the force of water was not sufficient to carry water to the roof. The fire spread rapidly, extending to the house occupied by Charles Yost, Prof. Niles' barn, across the street to Henry Yosts' shop, all of which were destroyed. The roof of Henry Yost's house caught several times, but was extinguished with buckets and axes. Prof. Niles' house was saved. Cressy & Wells lost about $400 worth of lumber which had been left to be dressed. They had 80,000 feet there, much of which was saved. Mears & Son's loss is heavy. They had 100 finished machines, nearly 200 under way, and a big lot of castings, to the building. All their machinery is rained. Their loss is nearly $6000, par-

$500. The pressure of water was at no time sufficient, and if the wind had been blowing a conflagration could not have been averted.

Besides the varied collection of books, there is received a great many newspapers both daily and weekly. Many an hour is pleasantly and profitably spent by our comrades in this room. It is open all bours of the day and the forepart of the evenings. In the spacious basement will be found properly arranged a barber, tailor, chair, and shoe shop, with skillful workmen in each department. There is also a large smoking room with all the conveniences for the comrades to pass time, smoking, reading, listening to instrumental music of telling army stories. The laundry is also found in the basement. All heavy articles ar e washed by the regular laundrymen;

selves if able. The hospital is a brick structure two stories with capacity to room at least two hundred. It is complete in all its deand assistants in the proper way. It is reached from the Home by a walk of one hundred feet through a green house. At times a walk through this house is almost sufficient to cure the sick. Everything here seems a little late, especially shrubbery, flowers and vegetation; but in this extensive hot or green-house it seems the season has not been consulted.

The inclosure is marked off in circling cut, and walks well paved with stone and gravel. It is neatly fenced, and throughout the whole grounds can be seen fine trees and choice shrubb.ry and flowers. The farm land, just outside belonging to the home, is at present pretty much' under cultivation. The laborers are faithfully trucking every foot of it to the best advantage. They have splendld teams, and fine cows. A number of cows are kept on the farm for their milk. This pure article reaches the horpital and as much farther as it will go. The balance needed is purchased. It would do your farmers good to see one of the iron gray percheron teams here, each horse weighing over a ton, sleek and clean limbed. I looked at the term from the window about an hour. Every thing on this little farm is petted; the borses, cattle, fowls, and in fact all look like it. By this time however, everything is approaching completion The spiral iron stairway, leading out of th orthwest corner of the dining-room to the fourth floor, is a decidedly novel piece of workman-ship. Every part of it is iron and it occupies only the horizontal space of a tower seven feet in diameter. This stair way was built for daily use, but it may al so serve the double purpose of an admirable fire escape. The manual training room is about done, and the much talked of veran da is under way. This will be when fin ished, both an ornament and a luxury. It will be one hundred seventy feet long and frontage of the building. The prospect we think, from this porch is indeed, hardly excelled by any in the state. Even though the term is now more than half through, yet each week brings some new students. The model school enrolled four this week and the main school two. and thus the good work goes on.
