In the centre of the hall was a long table loaded down with good things, and small on the steamer. tables and chairs filled the room. The gentlemen were requested to serve the viands, and this duty they performed like raisins, lemonade and ice cream. It was of the school. Heretofore the dinner has been served at one of the hotels, and the attendance has been from 50 to 80 people. The formality of a course dinner rendered them rather stiff affairs. Two hundred or more partook of the collation last week, and all formality was dispensed with. Mr. and Mrs. Stiles and their assistants prepared the refreshments, and a unanimous vote of thanks was tendered them for the very satisfactory manner in which they discharged their duty. When all appetites were appeased, Dr.

On the 21st day of June it was the privi-ege of the writer to set out on a trip to

Boston, for the purpose of attending the Sixth Annual Convention of the National Editorial Association. Taking the care at Bloomsburg our party of four, reached Northumberland, without incident worthy of note. It was a stormy day, and the rain made travelling more pleasant by settling the dust. At Northumberland we boarded the Pennsylvania Railroad, one of the most liberal corporations in the State. In my travels through the states of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts I found nowhere more comfortable and elegant appointments, or more considerate treatment than at the hands of the Pennsylvania. The most luxurious coaches, the most rapid locomotives, the most polite employees, road beds free from dust by reason of stone ballast, rendered the trip while on the line of this ompany, a most delightful one. We reached New York in the evening at about six o'clock, and registered at the Hotel Glenham. Shortly after being shown to our rooms we were waited upon by the bell boy, who asked if we were entirely satisfled with our quarters. Not being just what we wanted we were given more desirable rooms. This extra attention at a fashionable metropolitan hotel, being somewhat unusual, was a subject of comment, and we could not understand it until we learned that the proprietor of the house, Mr. N. B. Barry, formerly was the Proprietor of the Herdie House at Williams. port, and his chief clerk, Mr. John D. Ward, was at one time the proprietor of the Valley House at Wilkes-Barre. Our names being familiar to the latter secured is many courtesies. The Glenham is lo cated on Fifth Avenue, below 22nd street. against the Danville club the day previous and everything about it is homelike, and everything about it is comfortable and pleasant, and it is free from the hurly-bur v of larger houses The table is run on the European plan, and the cooking is unsurpassed. We would advise our friends o try the Glenham, while in New York. The forenoon of the first day in New York was spent in Central Park. It would

e presumptuous to attempt to describe spot so well known. Among the points of interest here are the lakes, the statues, the Mall, the Zoological garden, Cleopatra's needle, the Art Gallery, and the lovely drives. Hundreds of acres of land are in closed in the park, and it is all kept like a beautiful lawn. We could not help contrasting it with Fairmount Park in Philadelphia, which latter place we visited on our return journey. Fairmount seems to be turned to utility rather than beauty, and its broad acres are devoted to raising hay rather than to the cultivation of lawns. In the afternoon a trip was made

Coney Island, when we met eight other people from Bloomsburg by chance. Their names have already appeared in the COLUMBIAN. Coney Island is the great resort for New Yorkers who can spend but a day or two at the seashore. There are magnificent hotels, and cheap eating houses. All kinds of entertainments abound, including minstrel shows, merry go-rounds, toboggan slides, razzle-dazzles and hundreds of catch penuies. These are all in operation seven days in the week, and Sunday is their especial harvest. The bathing is good here and thousands of ecople in bathing suits hned the shore. In this building Charles Unangst Esq. has his office, and we made him a brief call. He is very pleasantly located.

At 5.30 on Monday, June 23, we boarded a steamer of the Norwich line. The steamer was crowded with passengers, nany of them being editors and their wives on their way to Boston, from almost every state in the Union. Badges were at once produced and pinned on the coat, showing where each one was from. It did not take long to become acquainted, and the hours until midnight were passed in social enjoyment. New London was reached at one o'clock in the morning, but the passengers were not aroused until 3. when they took a train for Boston, arriving there at 7 a. m. The Norwich line of which I spoke last week, extended the ourtesies of transportation to the deletates to the convention. Their boats are swift and safe and the treatment received from the hands of the officers and employees was courteous and considerate. These boats leave daily from Watts street New York, and the fare to Boston is only $4.00. Excellent meals can be obtained returned to Boston next day.

Of Boston, the proud and wealthy city, rich in historical memories, cultured and refined, columns might be written, but this is not the time or place. Every history is full of it.

On Saturday morning, June 28, we boarded the cars of the Old Colony railroad and went to Newport, R. I. the most fashionable resort in America. It is on Narragansett Bay, five miles from the ocean. It is on a declivity facing the harbor, and has a state house, custom house, city hall, the Redwood Library, containing 20,000 volumes, and other public buildings. The "old stone mill" is one of its chief attractions. No one seems to know when this structure was built. It has been s theme of much learned discussion. It stands in a little park in the heart of the city and is surrounded by an iron railing-It is circular in form, being probably 30 feet in diameter, and is supported on seven pillars. It is built of small stones and nortar, and whatever its origin, it is wonderful how it has withstood the ravages of time. It looks as though it might have been built but yesterday. It is asserted by some antiquaries to have been built by the Northmen 500 years before Columbus discovered America, and this is the theory that the Newport people like to encourage, But the probabilities are that it was a wind mill erected by one of the early governor of the colony some distance this side of Columbus. Believue Avenue, lined with beautiful land. It is the principle thoroughfare, and at fashionable hours is crowded with elegant equipages. Horses of the highest breed, harness mounted in gold or silver; coachmen and footmen in the grandest veries, after the most approved "English" style, can be seen everywhere. Our atten- ter of Berwick. tion was particularly attracted by an equipage in mourning. A lady dressed in deep lack broadcloth, the horses were black. the harness was black, and the pug dog on the lady's lap had on a black blanket. It was to me a most remarkable exhibition of be but little heartfelt sorrow where there was so much outward display. But perhaps I do not understand the ways of the fashionable world. It may be that such an exhibition is just the proper caper among the millionaires who spend their ummers in this beautiful city. Among the most attractive summer homes here are those of the Astors, the Vanderbuilts the Goolets, and other New York million ires. In the evening we took a sail in the harbor in what is known as a "cat boat." It is a sail boat about 25 feet long and about 10 feet wide. The captain was a lar with the harbor. He was very polite and made our trip a pleasant one by call-Among them were Fort Adams, one of the most costly and expensive fortifications in S. W. Dickson and wife; M. P. Lutz and the United States, the Purgatory Rocks, the Hanging Rocks, Spouting Cave, the ter and wife. Glen, the ruined Fort Louis, at the entrance of the harbor, and its surrounding rocks called the Dumplings. All the yachts were illuminated by electric lights. and on their decks were gay and brilliant parties of ladies and gentlemen, some singing and some dancing to fine music. We sailed so close to some of them that it seemed as though a collision was inevitable, but our skillful captain always steered us clear of danger.

But time passes on, and we must hasten o the pier of the Fall River Steamer which we are to take for New York. Our captain lands us there safely, and we bid him farewell. Shortly after 9 o'clock there appears in sight what looks like a floating palace. As t lands at the pier it looks a veritable Leviathan. The insgnificent steamer Puritan is before us, the fluest boat that navigates Long Island Sound. We had heard before of the magnificence of the boats of the Fall River Line, but this surpasses all our expectations. As we enter we find luxuriance on every side. Strains of delicions music fill the air, and as we enter the successful event of the kind in the history cow paths, and I believe it. And I also grand saloon we find it comes from an ordeck. Our state rooms, previously secur ed in Boston are soon found, and after depositing our luggage we are ready to enjoy the sail down the sound. It was a perfect night. The moon shone on the waters, and we clambered to the upper deck. Here were life boats and rafts, and life preservers, and all the means of safety in case of accident, but we had no need for them The sound was as calm as a mill pond, and the steamer moved without any perceptible motion. Years ago when a young man I used to steam up and down the sound, but I never in all my experience found a more perfect night. On he boat were a number of Yale students just from the races New Loadon, where Yale beat Harvard, and they made the night resound with cheers for Yale. They also sang some college songs which carried us back some wenty years, but we refrained from joining in the chorus for tear of frightening the passengers. The night passed and we landed in New York. Taking the Pennsylvania train we reached Philadelphia on Sunday morning, June 29th, and on Mon day morning we continued our journey home, after ten days of one of the most delighted trips of our lives.

Democrats, Attention!

Thanking you for the kindly sentiment and encouragement I receive from all parts election district, and canvass it as much as possible, in which there is no candidate for Legislature, before August 9th, if my health permits. Please remember, that though I have before been beaten for nomination, I never sulked, kicked or ran as an independent candidate, but have always supported the ticket as made; that in politics have never been anything but a Demo

I think my long faithful service to the party, as well as hearty support of candilates, privately and on the stump, without asking what was their nationality, creed, or rivate and personal opinions, only that they were the regular nominees of the Democratic party, entitles me at this time to you support. If nominated and elected, pledge you a faithful service as Represen lative, supporting the ptatform and measures of the party, and in all things obeying the will of my constituency, regardless of my own private opinions; that upon questions of party interest, the party caucus would be my rule of action; that upon questions of public concern, the peoples will would be my law. I desire to pledge you my word that

The growth of the town is shown by the and the numerous new industries, the next ten years ought to show a much larger per centage of increase than ever before There is a reason for the slowness of growth from 1870 to 1880. Before that time ne. the mining of iron ore gave employment to a large number of men. Most of the mines have been worked out, and a great many of those who earned their living by delving under ground have sought other fields, and moved away with their families. Ten sight to see four horse teams hauling ore through the streets of the town. Now only an occasional wagon load is to be seen. Most of the ore used at the furnaces is brought from Snyder county, Maryland and Virginia. But with the decline of this means of employment new industries have arisen, and there is every reason to believe that our town is destined to grow as neve At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of he West Chester Normal School last week, the following resolutions of regret at the resignation of Prof. Welsh and wife were passed unanimously:

Resolved; That in the removal of Profes sor J P. Weish to another place of usefulness the West Chester State Normal School has sustained a loss not easily repaired, and that the Board of Trustees, in accepting his resignation, do desire to place upon record their unanimous testimony, no only to his trained ability as a teacher and to the unusual success that has marked his connection with this institution, but do also at the same time attest his purity and uprightness of character, his rare execuive talent and his peculiar fitness for the nstruction and government of youth. Resolved; That the Trustees of the West Chester State Normal School, in accepting the resignation of Mrs. Al na Sager Welsh while they cannot refrain from an expres ion of deep regret in parting with one who has by many years of service added dignity and worth to the institution, they at the same time have great pleasure in testifying to her extraordinary zeal and enthu siasm as an austructor, her constant and
